He was appointed a Deputy Land Surveyor at an early date; was captain in the militia, and served in the War of 1812, at the close of which he was assigned the duty of conveying prisoners of war to Quebec. He was also appointed, in 1816, agent for the officers of the Land Granting Department, and in this connection received a pension from the year 1834. He owned and occupied for some time a farm on Yonge Street, now known as Summer Hill; also, park lot No. 4, now in the city, where he resided at the time of his death. He was twice married; two sons and one daughter survived him.
