men, we were forced to retire. This brought our total strength down to eighty. We started with 251 men. We had no officers left.'

"On the 18th, at 4.30 in the morning we reached a village where we thought we would be able to rest, and we collected some straw. Before half an hour had passed, however, the shrapnel had again found us out. We spent the afternoon in this village which was continually under shell fire in spite of the fact that our guns were shelling the enemy's artillery. We heard our colonel say that our guns could not get at those of the enemy satisfactorily because the latter were so well concealed.

"Our condition is now really awful, for we have to sleep out in all weather. We are looking forward to a speedy end. We are very badly off as regards food."

Another letter written during the retreat in front of the French from Montmirail contains the following:

"After a thirty six hour march we had a rest, and arrived just in time for the fight. For three days we did not have a hot meal because our field kitchens were lost. We get a hot meal yesterday evening. Although we are all just ready to drop, we must march on."

Here is another abstract from the same letter:

Here is another abstract from the same letter: 'We found great quantities of food, but fearing poison we did not take possession of it until we had gotten hold of the pro-prietor of the house and com-pelled him to taste it first. Of our regiment of 3,000 men there are now only 1,600 left. Let us hope that this terrible battle, which ought to be one of the greatest in history, will leave me safe and well and give us peace.
