WITH GERMANY AND THE UNITED STATES-UTTERS A NOTE OF DEFIANCE TO FRANCE:

London, December 1. It has been long since a public speech has been delivered that has excited so much comment as Mr. Chamberlain's yesterday. Every provincial paper, important or unimportant, has a leading editorial this morning discussing the colonial secretary's deliverance. The liberal and radical papers naturally are little pleased. They think that England ought to continue the policy of withholding herself from entangling alliances and they attack Mr. Chamberlain hotly for the irritating tone he adopted toward France. They remind the public that this is only a repetition of the "splash" he made in his speech of May 13 last year, when in the same way, he incensed Russia. One journal ironically asks whether the foreign secretary still exists, or whether the foreign office has been merged in the colonial office. On the other hand most of the Conservative and moderate Liberal organs comment upon the speech with great approval, alleging that there never was a time when such an understanding was more essential between nations who are natural allies for peace and civilization.

THE SPEECH. London Dec. 1 .- Joseph Chamberlain, the secretary of state for the colonies, in a speech at a luncheon at Leicester yesterday, said that ever since the great split in the Liberal party he had found himself a mark for the slanders and misrepresentations of the "baser sort of politicians," but that he had and misrepresentations of the "baser sort of politicians," but that he had found compensation in the generous appreciation of the majority of his countrymen. Continuing, Mr. Chamberlain said he was deeply gratified that the foreign relations of Great Britain were so satisfactory, and he asserted that the country owed a debt of gratifude to Lord Salisbury, for the great improvement in Great Britain's position. It was especially gratifying, he said, to note the friendly relations existing between the Anglo-Saxon branches, saying that the understanding between the United States and Great Britain was indeed a guarantee of the peace of the world. This statement was greated with cheers. It was of the utmost importance, Mr. Chamberlain further remarked, that Great Britain should not remain isolated in Europe and her natural alliance was Europe and her natural alliance was with the great German empire. They had had difficulties with Germany, but their interests and sentiments were the same and an understanding be-eign press Mr. Chamberlain said these newspapers had not even spared "the almost sacred person of the Queen." This, he said, provoked national indig-nation, "which may have serious con-sequences if our neighbors do not mend their ways."

An outburst of cheering greeted this threat of the colonial secretary. It threat of the colonial secretary. It was a matter for congratulation, Mr. Chambérlain aserted, that the worst of these "disgraceful attacks" did not appear in the German papers. BRITAIN AND AMERICA,

BRITAIN AND AMERICA.

Dealing with the attitude of foreign nations, Mr. Chamberlain said:

"I rejoice, and it is perhaps natural, for I have taken a personal interest in the matter, in the friendly feeling which I hope is now permanent between the two great branches of the Anglo-Saxon race. I have so many friends in the United States, almost as many as I have here, and I can conceive of no greater disaster to the two countries than to find themselves hostile to each other. Yet I rememhostile to each other. Yet I remem-ber, when I first visited America, my surprise and astonishment at the evi-dence given me by statesmen and poli-ticians and in articles in the press of constant suspicion of the objects of Great Britain, doubts as to her integrity and an unfavorable estimate of our prospects and character.

"Once, addressing a great meeting in Philadelphia, I ventured to say that what we wanted was a new Columbus to set out from America, discover the united kingdom and return to America and tell them something they did not know of the character of of the strange inhabitants of those is

This ill-feeling was due, no doubt, to many causes, due to the fact that the United States has never been at the United States has never been at war with any great power but England, due to their traditions, extending over a century, flue to a feeling that the sympathy of Great Britain was not with them in their civil war, and to the general belief that the people of Great Britain would see with satisfaction any harm that might befall them. tion any harm that might befall them.
"It appears to me useless to contradict these mistaken opinions. But what the asservations of statesmen could not do was done, by the sympathy we were able to give when the United States found itself the object of suspicion which has so often accom-panied our own transactions when engaged in a war of justice against op-pression, a war in favor of civiliza-tion and good government. Cur actions proved to the Americans that we were indeed one people, of the same thoughts and guided by the same principles. The assurance that was given them in the course of the Spanish war will, I believe, never be forgotten, and has placed our relations in an admir-able position. The union, the alliance, if you please, the understanding between these two great nations is in-deed a guarantee of the peace of the think any far-seeing English statesman must have long desired, that we should not remain permanently isolated from the continent of Europe, and I think it must have appeared evident to everybody that the natural alli-ance is between ourselves and the German empire. We have our differnces, quarrels and contentions, but they have all been about petty matters. These difficulties have been gradually removed, until now I cannot conceive that any point can arise in the immediate future which can birng ourselves and the Germans into antagonism of interests. On the con-trary, I can forsee many things in the future which must cause anxiety to the statesmen of Europe, but in which Germany's and in which the understanding of which I have spoken in the case of America, might, if extended to Germany, do more, perhaps than any combination of arms to preserve the peace of the world."

A new triples alliance between; the Teutonic race and the two great branches of the Anglo-Saxons would, said the Colonial Secretary, be a po-tent influence in the future of the world. The speaker explained that he used the word "alliance" but it mattered little whether they had an alli-ance committed to paper or "an under-standing which existed in the minds of the statesmen of the respective countries." A determination in every case tries." A determination in every case to look for favorable motives upon the part of those with whom friendship was desired would be an enermous advantage to both the nations concerned and others.

they had lived a life of quarrels for some eight years. The principal cause of dispute was the question of money. Werke would bring home what little money he earned from doing odd jobs of labor, principally from pruning trees, which he was an adept at. The understanding between the couple was that Werke should receive $1 a week for drink money, and generally the financial transaction would end in a quarrel, Werke demanding more than the dollar at once. Last evening the row assumed a more serious aspect. Werke was under the influ-ence of drink. The witness was asleep in his bed, and was awakened by the woman calling to him to confe to her, that Werke, was killing her. He jumped out of bed, and throwing his overcoat on, rushed out in the room. He found the woman standing with her back to her husband. Blood was Over $100.

The Ladies' Assisting Society are having one of the most successful sales having one of the most successful sales in the history of their work. The pleasant store was thronged all day and all visitors were welcomed. Fancy work and useful household linens are being received and sold all the time. Those who have visited the store are surprised at the bargains offered. A warm invitation is extended to all to call and inspect. The ladies promise to see that no one leaves empty-handed. Yesterday's reports of sales are very encouraging. The ladies of Holy Trinity church who had charge of the luncheor. tables handed the secretary $23,46, and the young ladies of the same church who had the candy tables made $7.51, which makes a total of $31.

The Baptist church did well at their candy table. They are continuing to day and so have not made any returns as yet.

The First Presbyterian church booth did a splendid business. They are waiting till they sell out, however, before they give a report of sale.

The Ladies' Assisting Society took in the handsome sum of $42.70, from the sale of dolls, fancy works, etc., at their booth.

The Assisting Society will also have
