LYDIA BURNS' EXPERI-MENT.
"Seems to me you're lookin' sort o' blue this mornin', Liddy. What's the matter?"
Lydia Burns lifted her gloomy eyes to the face of the questioner, a plump, rosy-poly little woman. "Matter enough, I should think," she burst forth vehemently. "Ain't the sun o' them trees enough to make anyone look blue? pointing a bony finger toward the rows of straight young pear and cherry trees that skirted her small yard. Tufts of brown and withered blossoms and blackened, shrivelled foliage clung to their branches, sole remnants of the beautiful masses of pink and snow-white blossoms that clothed them less than four days before.

Mrs Atwood glanced through the muslin curtains, open window, at the gently swaying boughs. "Oh, you mean the frost. 'Yes, 'tis a pity," she murmured, placidly. "But then, what can't be cured must be endured, you know, an' 'I ain't the least bit o' doubt but the trees'll bear all the better for restin' up one season," she added with characteristic optimism.

But the cheering prophecy quite failed to comfort Lydia. "I don't see why such things is allowed to happen anyway," she protested fretfully.
"Well, I dunno as I do," her companion answered thoughtfully, "but sometimes I think it do make young folks appreciate the blessings they do enjoy more. Here we go havin' fruit year after year, and no one says 'till one or thinks a thing about it. Then some ones in five or six years they crop fail, and what a growlin' and grumpin' there in. Not but what a pity, o' course, she added in a cyclical tone, as she suddenly remembered that her listener was one of the grumblers.

Lydia heaved a dismal sigh. "I don't see what folks is to do," she declared gloomily. "Do!" Mrs Atwood repeated sharply. "They'll have to do the best they kin. 'What does folks do that lives there ain't a mite o' fruit? There's my sister Esther, that lives in Asisquo. Why, I'll perjure me say there ain't a fruit tree in a hundred miles o' her place, an' when I was down there two years ago she had more stuff done up than I did an' I livin' right in a fruit country, too. She had every can and jar filled.
'For the land sake! What did she put in 'em?' Lydia exclaimed, her curiosity getting the better of her despendency.

"Veg tables," answered Mrs Atwood with a smile. "An' mighty good they was, too. Why, Eh's terramer melon rind preserves were just as nice as they could be. I brought home a couple o' cans of 'em, an' our folks thought they never ate anything so good. Why, when the fruit crop failed five years ago, there was Mis' Dean with her big family, never put up a can; an' there's Mis' Prince, takin' boarders an' all, in Feb'wary, had just two cans, an' one of them was elderberries. I guess either one of them women would have been glad enough of some of Eh's nice canned and preserved vegetables. Why, using Dr. Chase's Kidney Pills, I was troubled with a great deal of nervousness, and headache, which seemed to be caused from indigestion. Since using this preparation for a time, all these distressing symptoms have disappeared and I consider though, I knew they'd never be a-dozed with paris green, dirty suds, road dust an' the like." Lydia was adding day by day various helpful items to her store of generating lore, and under Uncle Gale's efficient tutelage, was fast becoming an expert gardener. She also received many valuable suggestions from a file of old horticulture journals which she had unearthed in the attic. In one of the journals she read an article that extolled the virtues of liquid manure. Therefore, when the cucumber, melon, squash and pumpkin vines yellowed and grew spindly, during a rather protracted drought, she promptly filled an old leech barrel with well rotted manure, afterward adding to the water and rattling it off precisely as does the housewife when leaching her ashes.

A quantity of the liquid fertilizer, thus secured, was judiciously applied to the sickly plants which immediately put forth a luxuriant growth of dark green foliage dotted over with fruitful yellow blossoms. A recepticle was conveniently placed for receiving soap suds, which Lydia had used as a good fertilizer agent.
"You must put up a good lot of green terramer mince, Liddy," Mrs Atwood remarked one day. "Apples is going to be terrible scarce—it'll be hard gittin' enough for mince meat. Green terramer sauce makes a proper good pie—some say they can't tell it from real mince." Lydia gave an incredulous sniff.
'Green terramer mince' she had never heard of such a thing. She knew that when she tasted the piece her good natured hostess chanced to have handy, her opinion changed. The first mouthful convinced her that it was a very good pie, and before the last toothsome, flaky morsel disappeared she had mentally decided that at least 12 cans of the delectable mince should grace the shelves of her store closet.

Lydia's garden boasted several unique specimens of the vegetable kingdom—named respectively the ground cherry, vegetable peach and garden lemon. Delicious sauces, pickles and preserves can be made from each of these and they are, therefore a valuable acquisition to any garden when fruit is scarce. They also make excellent pies.
Rows of Rock Red cabbage and creamy hearted cauliflower spanned the length of the larger of Lydia's gardens. These were eagerly snapped up by pickle-loving housewives, and though Lydia had a large supply of each, she found she could have profitably disposed of many more.
Other green vegetables such as corn, beans, cucumbers and the crinkly cress that lined the banks of the intersecting stream found quick sales and good prices at a nearby summer resort.

With a neat little sum was realized and the lean pocketbook was becoming decidedly plump. However, it was not until the summer waned, and the vegetable crop matured and ripened by the glorious autumn sunshine, had been turned into golden coins, that Lydia realized the full measure of her success—a success that far exceeded her most extravagant dreams. Lydia wandered indeed, that more women did not turn to gardening as a means of securing that great desideratum of the temperate heart, pin money, and incidently good health, as well.

Besides, both Uncle Gales' table and her own had been provided with the choicest and freshest vegetables, through the summer and their cellars were well filled for the winter. Then her preserve closet! Lydia's eyes glittered with true housewifely pride as she gazed upon its crowded shelves —not an inch of empty space. There were canned corn, peas, asparagus and rhubarb, tomato and melon—and preserves. Lydia used the smallest varieties of tomatoes, both red and yellow, which are specially adapted for preserving, pickling and drying in sugar. There were canned squash and pumpkin, delicious pumpkin butter and pumpkin chips, rhubarb and tomato jelly, pink, ruby and gold jars, a round dozen, held green tomato mince. Pickles galore, cucumbers, mustard and mixed pickles, green, red and yellow peppers, stuffed and pickled mangoes, pickled beets, beans, carrots, real cabbage and the tiny Bartlett's onion, helped to fill the shelves. Beside there were sacks of dried pumpkin and lima beans and bags of sour kraut.

Mrs Atwood had been ill when the matatoes ripened and had failed to secure a supply of her favorite preserves. Lydia, therefore, presented to the good woman several jars from her own store. Mrs Atwood was delighted with the gift, but demurred at the generosity of the donor. But Lydia was not short. "You deserve 'em an' more, too," she observed curtly. "If it hadn't been for the hint you give me about raisin' veg tables, I'd most likely set right down and let disappointment eat my heart out." It was in February of the following winter that a whole sleighload of uncles, aunts and cousins came to pay Lydia an all-day visit. When, during the afternoon, the women began bewailing their lack of canned stuff, pickles, etc., Lydia triumphantly revealed to them the treasures of her store closet. Then she told the story of her 'successful venture.'
'New England Homestead.'

Influence of the Bible.
The century services in connection with the Bible Society held recently in Halifax are of more than usual interest. No one book has had such powerful influence on the thought of the world, for the teachings thereof have been carried to far isolated islands and have revolutionized whole kingdoms. For one hundred years the British Foreign Bible Society has carried on the work of printing and distributing the Scriptures throughout all the nations of the world. It was organized in London on March 7, 1804. When the society first began work Bibles were scarce even in England; today there are estimated to be three hundred million copies in circulation, the greater number of which have been supplied from the society's presses.

Practically all the versions of the Scriptures which are published in native languages and dialects are sent out by the Society. When a missionary returns home to make a translation into a new tongue the Society takes charge of the work and pays his expenses while he is engaged upon it.
A stock of Bibles is furnished to the field whence he comes, and in all the world a costly one. The Bible is now issued by the Society in 355 languages or dialects, of which 237 were added during Queen Victoria's reign alone. In all the society has sent 180,000,000 volumes, and for the past half century the annual circulation has been growing at the average rate of 93,000 per annum.

As might be supposed, there is a heavy drain on the resources of the society. Last year the revenue was £233,138, and the expenditure was £254,204, leaving a deficit of £21,066.
To provide for a large overdraft and place the society on a firmer financial basis, an appeal is being made for a centenary fund for quarter of a million guineas. Canada is asked for $50,000.
All the missionary societies in the English speaking world depend on the society for their supply of Bibles and Testaments, so that every one has an interest in helping on its work.

Everywhere the influence of the Bible is felt. No other book holds such a prominent place by such a large number and no book is more widely circulated. The pity is that in this province there is for our children so little time taken to the thorough study of this precious book.
There is lots of time on the conspectus for all the 'ologies' and scientific lads of the moment, but when it comes to a question of bible-study, how gingerly the authorities think they must tread! Yet it is a book that has influenced more lives and contains more instruction than all the books of the school course put together.—Recorder.

OUR FAMILY MEDICINE

Mrs. G. W. Finkbe, Sturgeon Bay, Ont., writes:—"In the year 1867 I was very bad with my kidneys. I could not work on account of my back being lame, sore and painful all the time. I then carefully followed the directions of our family doctor he was unable to do me much good. At this time Dr. Chase was becoming known as an especially successful physician, and on the advice of my doctor, Charles Williams, I went to Dr. Chase at Ann Arbor, Michigan, and he gave me a box of his pills for kidney disease.
"You can scarcely imagine how much good

I went back to the doctor and bought a dozen

Dr. Chase's Pills
Two colored women sitting on their front steps, were overheard boasting of the many lovable traits and manly virtues of their husbands.
"Gawge certainly is a good man to me," said Mrs. Jackson, with feeling in her voice. "Ah have never been without a day's wash since Ah washed that man. He gets me all the washings Ah can do."
"Well, Ah has this to say to you," declared Mrs. Johnson with satisfaction; "when Berra gets drunk he gets drunk like a perfect geniel-man."

Every farmer knows that some plants grow better than others. Soil may be the same and seed may seem the same but some plants are weak and others strong.
And that's the way with children. They are like young plants. Same food, same home, same care but some grow big and strong while others stay small and weak.
Scott's Emulsion offers an easy way out of the difficulty.
Child weakness often means starvation, not because of lack of food, but because the food does not feed.
Scott's Emulsion really feeds and gives the child growing strength.
Whatever the cause of weakness and failure to grow—Scott's Emulsion seems to find it and set the matter right.

The quaintest feature of the picuresque costumes of the Korean man is their hats. They are mousetrap like arrangements made from the hair of the wearer's ancestors. This priceless possession is handed down from father to eldest son, who reaches the goal of his ambition at the moment when the family hat is placed upon his head. Another grotesque form of Korean headgear is the morning hat that is worn in rural districts by the eldest son for three years after the death of either of his parents. This conical shaped affair of rushes or rice straw is as large as a bushel basket and extends to the shoulders.

Pneumonia is Filling the Hospitals.
Every day we hear of some one being taken with pneumonia. The only preventive is to get strong and keep the body healthy. Take Ferreroze which makes the rich red kernel of blood that nourishes and stimulates the entire system. I was all run down, and an apt subject for pneumonia," writes A. B. Charters, of Burlington, "when I tried Ferreroze.

Neuralgic Headache is Usually Attended with blinding pain, but relief comes quickly when Nervine is applied; for it is the strongest pain reliever in the world. I consider Nervine a most magical remedy for neuralgia. I am subject to violent attacks," writes Mrs E. G. Harris of Baltimore, but never worry if Nervine is in the house. "The prompt relief that Nervine brings makes it priceless to me. A few applications never yet failed to kill the pain. I can also recommend Nervine for stiffness in the joints and rheumatism." Try Nervine yourself. Price 25 cents.

SINCE 1867
Mrs. G. W. Finkbe, Sturgeon Bay, Ont., writes:—"In the year 1867 I was very
he was unable to do me much good. At this
advice of my doctor, Charles Williams, I went
gave me a box of his pills for kidney disease.
"You can scarcely imagine how much good they did me. They helped me so much that
more. In my mind there is not a medicine half so good as Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills for kidney trouble and headache. We always keep them in the house as a family medicine, and I would not think of using any other."
