Manufacturers Should Advertise.

The Press is ever willing to boost local industries, and give encouragement to the manufacturers of home made goods. The Press too is ever ready to proclaim far and wide the advantages to be derived from continuous patronage of articles produced in the local factories, and to do all that of which printers' ink can be made capable, in order to encourage and increase the output of local concerns, and to declare their virtues and qualities to would-be purchasers. But to make a complete success of the boosting movement, the Press should have the co-operation of the manufacturers. There are two ways of boosting, one by advertisement, judiciously and attractively written, the other by letter press puff. A conjunction of these methods will never fail to bring results. Discussing this matter some day ago, a contemporary made the statement that half the people in Newfoundland scarcely know the extent and range of articles produced by local factories, simply because the managements had failed to advertise their wares. What such an omission means can be best known to the order departments of each concern. It is obvious that without advertising, trade is not going to thrive, and it is equally obvious that unless a thorough advertising campaign is entered upon as soon as possible, no great impetus will occur, and outport business men will continue to replenish their stocks with the purchase of foreign-made articles to the loss and detriment of trade and labor at home. The moral is plain and does not need to be pointed further.

The Unseating of Mr. Coaker.

A most amusing story was recently told us, a story all the more humorous because of its truth. It was related by a Northern merchant who had once been a member of the F.P.U. and had been expelled for some breach of the rules. During the general election last fall Mr. Coaker was to address a meeting at the settlement in which informant lives. The latter, wishing to hear what Mr. Coaker had to say, went to the meeting and as there was a shortage of chairs, he brought one along with him, and loaned it to the Chairman for Mr. Coaker's use. The Chairman, however, after calling the meeting to order, said, "Mr. Coaker, as you are not a member of the Union I must ask you to withdraw." The merchant jumped to his feet, and replied "well if I go, my property goes with me," and he marched up to the platform, made Mr. Coaker get off the chair, and taking it in his arms, walked out of the hall amidst cheers for "the only man who ever unseated Coaker."

Police Court.

It will come up for hearing at 10.30 a.m. Monday.

Big Booze Seizure.

FLIVVER FIGURES IN SENSATIONAL CAPTURE.

A flivver which was passing through Maruels last night at about 11.50 P.M., of that place. As the car passed the point where the Constable was standing the latter boarded it and discovered two fifteen gallon kegs of liquor in the tonneau. Fearing that the two occupants of the car would cut up rough on the road, Forsey made them stop and take aboard another resident of Maruels, and then ordered them to proceed to Bursell's at Topsail, from where he phoned the Inspector General of Police. The latter got his car out, and picking up Head Constables Byrne and O'Neil proceeded to Topsail and took on board the confiscated liquor which they then brought to the police station to be added to the already large stock now stored therein. The two men implicated will come up for trial during next week. We presume the defense will be that the spirits were to be used as fuel for the car.

With Closed Doors.

The Fish Exporters Association met in the Board of Trade Rooms today, beyond that there was no other information given out. The Secretary, Mr. Goodridge, would neither deny or confirm the fact that a meeting had been held and no amount of enquiry could elicit any information as to its purpose. Reticence was patently the order of the day.

Fish Carrier Abandoned.

Mr. Leonard Earle received a message yesterday saying that the Danish schooner Harriet, while coming out of Fogor, had struck the rocks and was leaking. A later message stated that the schooner had been abandoned and the crew safe. The Harriet was loaded by Earle & Sons, Fogor, with 3000 qts. Labrador fish and was on her way to Alicante.

Monument to Eugene Field.

The children of Chicago have been saving pennies to erect a monument to Eugene Field, the children's poet, ever since his death, twenty-three years ago. The fund has now reached the sum of $25,000 and the monument is at last to be ordered.

Yesterday's Fire.

Yesterday evening about 5 o'clock, the Central and East End fire companies were called to the home of J. Carter, Quidi Vidi Road, where quite a blaze was in progress. The fire originated from the explosion of a kerosene lamp and considerable damage was done both to house and furniture before it was quenched.

Bath Salts or Crystals are coming to be more and more popular in the toilet of the refined and are to be had in several different styles of popular odors. Bromley's Omar Khayyam and Violet are choice ones; and we have a nice English line in Violet Lanender and Cologne—two sizes in each of these odors. There are two sizes in McMurdo's Special Bath Salts, and in Armour's Luxor Bath Salts (Sel Parfum pour le bain) you have a first class American line. Danish Schooner Wrecked.

The following message was received this morning by Hon. Tasker Cook, Danish Consul for Nfld., from Fogor: "Danish schr. Harriet, with cargo fish ashore in Eastern Tickle, heavy sea, vessel total loss."

The Last Native Prince of Wales.

The title of "Prince of Wales" today conveys to us a widely different meaning to that which it held to the English of the thirteenth century. It is now borne by the eldest son of our Sovereign, who will one day reign over an immense Empire. In the stormy days of Wales it was borne by a sturdy Welshman, whose only wish was to hold the title principally for his people without undergoing the humiliation of rendering homage to the King of England, whom he despised and hated. The last Prince who was a native and an independent ruler, was Llewellyn, who waged a lengthy and fierce war with Edward I.—a war which only terminated with Llewellyn's death on December 11, 1282, which was brought about at Aber-Edn, by treachery on the part of the English. Since that time Wales has been incorporated with England, the bond of mutual interest at first serving to hold the two countries together, while now Wales feels that she is part of the British Empire, and is bound to it by the closest of ties. Ever since the birth of Edward's son at Carnarvon it has been the custom—only departed from in few instances—to give the title of "Prince of Wales" to the eldest son of the reigning Sovereign.

A Great Meeting Place.

One of the fullest pleasures of life is that of mixing with one's fellows and with all the changes in habits and customs this one feature of social intercourse never has, and never will, alter.

The scene may change, but not the players. One can often read accounts in the local newspapers and magazines of the more famous of the social centres of St. John's in days gone by. These places were centres where friends and acquaintances met, where invitations were given, gossip exchanged, and the full circle of the preceding days' and nights' doings discussed.

With the passing of all these centres where, you may ask, can people expect to meet their acquaintances and friends, or is it no longer the "thing" to attend a social rendezvous? Why, yes, my good reader, it is just as much the "thing" as ever it was, though the centre of meeting has changed its location.

To-day the Big Stores on Water Street take the place of the old-time Bazaars, Saloons, Lotteries, &c.; as meeting places, and that they are far more comfortable, agreeable and adequate for that purpose most of us will acknowledge.

Yesterday I found myself in a Christmas shopping crowd at The Royal Stores. I had gone in to kill time, sauntering around the different departments, but was induced to buy several gift articles by the very attractive prices marked on them. It was while waiting for my change that the thought occurred to me, "What a wonderful great meeting place, centre of social life, and more and more recognised headquarters for shopping this great store had become." Even in that section of the crowd in which I was waiting I saw many whose faces were familiar to me as regular visitors—people from the West End, Circular Road, Gower Street and the nearby suburbs, many from even further afield—all intent upon the pleasures and duties of Christmas shopping and of course to keep in touch with things and meet acquaintances.

Whatever the motive that brings people to this store, the fact remains that every day hundreds of people direct their steps towards these doors because they know that here at The Royal Stores is St. John's Universal Meeting Place. Hundreds of individuals, men and women, hundreds of households and families look to The Royal Stores to supply their every need, and they come here because they have learned through experience that nowhere else can they so well, so agreeably, so satisfactorily make their purchases. Nowhere will their dollars receive a more definite and absolute value than in this, always better, centre of supply—The Royal Stores—the great meeting place and the great buying place of St. John's.
