

CURE SICK HEADACHE

Headache, yet Carter's Little Liver Pills are equally valuable in Constipation, curing and preventing this annoying complaint, while they also correct indigestion of the stomach, stimulate the liver and regulate the bowels. Even if they only cure the headache, they are worth the price.

As they would be almost priceless to those who suffer from this distressing complaint, but fortunately their goodness is not new. And those who once try them will find these little pills valuable in so many ways that they will not be willing to do without them. But after attack head breast pocket, and drew out the little leather wallet which held Intia's last letter. His heart so overflowed over the old souvenir and the new that his fingers and his bearded lips both trembled. That wonderful instinct of the eye struck him again, and he looked up through a thin, swift flash of tears. Once more he met Intia's glance, and again she blushed beneath it, and turned away in a new wonder and confusion. How dared the man to look at her, and why did she not resent it? Why did she even feel a pleasure in it? A raw country girl would have known better how to preserve her dignity.

Lady Mabel was holding up the note in half-coquettish, secret triumph to Lady McCordale, so that she and the old lady saw nothing of this rapid play. Intia was quite unmoved, and fell with shaking fingers to arranging some tridles about the stall.

At this point Humphrey Frost came providentially back again, and renewed the broken talk. Harry could speak with him, at least without betraying the emotions which filled him. By and by Lady Mabel broke in upon them.

After your presence at a fancy fair, Mr. Morton, your profession of reason will not be allowed to serve you. A fancy fair, except for the stall-keepers, is the most frivolous of town amusements. A hall, by comparison, is quite a solemn function.

"I shall really expect to see you at Milne House on Friday. I have received a response to my invitation beginning, 'Mr. Morton regrets, and bearing lithography upon its face. Now that shows that you are declining invitations wholesale, but really I expect you to reconsider your determination.'

"You will be at Lady Mabel's ball, Miss Grey?" said Frost, leaning across the counter.

"We are despatching terribly this week," Intia answered, with an almost feverish brightness. "We have three days of the fancy fair, the garden party at Lambeth Palace on Thursday, and Lady Mabel's ball on Friday."

"Come, Mr. Morton," said Lady Mabel, pray consent to bear the penalties of your position. If you are a shy lion I promise that you shall not be over-hunted."

"I shall be delighted," said Harry. "To accept your invitation."

Intia experienced a new disturbance. She had actually indicated her intended whereabouts, and looked to her as if she had offered an appointment. The man had certainly accepted it. And even yet she was not angry. Lady Mabel enjoyed quite a reputation as a lively and agreeable chatterbox, and once having found that the new lion, in spite of his scar and his other reminiscences of the desert, was clawless, she played about him with all the popgun artillery of her conversational charms.

As something she said Frost broke into a deorous laugh, and Harry, whose spirits were at something like fever heat, took it up in less conventional fashion. He had always had a jolly and infectious laugh, and had not of late years been accustomed to confine it within drawing-room limits. It rang out over the hum of talk, and two or three score of people turned to look at him.

Intia found Lady McCordale regarding her almost with a look of terror, and at that became conscious of her own aspect. Both hands had a ring to her hearing, and she was standing with parted lips and frightened eyes.

The laugh was so like Harry's. When she had first seen Mr. Ronald Morton he had brought Harry to her mind. The laugh brought him back again even more vividly. The look the stranger had bent upon her had been like Harry's. A mad, half-formed fancy made her limbs tremble. She knew how foolish and how wild it was, and put it from her mind, but she knew now the source of the interest the stranger excited in her. The tones of his voice had now and then a hint of Harry's in them. His eyes were a look of Harry—a resemblance fugitive, but strong. She understood how she had been in that knowledge became mistress of herself again.

CHAPTER XVII.

At about six o'clock that evening Mr. Vergueil, strolling leisurely into the vestibule of the hotel, saw there a man in a velvet skull-cap of dark blue seated in a little go-cart. He was in animated conversation with the hall porter, and the detective, turning his back upon him, studied the addresses of the telegrams exposed in a glass case upon the wall.

"Gilfoil," said the man in the go-cart, in a strong American tone. "Gilead C. Gilfoil was my name. Ronald Morton, that's my card, and it's got to go upstairs."

"Well, sir, I've told you already," the hall-keeper answered, "that Mr. Morton's orders are imperative. Your name, sir, is not on the list."

"I shan't leave till I've seen him," the man in the go-cart responded, "and if you won't take up my card, you'll have to take up a note. Get me an envelope."

The man obeyed, and whilst he was away Mr. Vergueil continued his study of the telegrams in the glass case. Mr. Gilfoil pencilled line by line two upon a leaf torn from his pocket-book, put his brief message into the envelope handed to him by the hall porter, and was in the act of addressing it, when a young man of commonplace exterior came down the stair-case, fluttering a sheet of paper in his hand.

"That's the amended list," he said, addressing the hall porter. "There are two or three new names on it. You'll find the additions at the bottom."

No Disappointment.

Disappointments of one kind and another crop up all along life's pathway, for unfortunately it is the unexpected that always happens. There is at least one article of acknowledged merit that never disappoints. Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor is sure to remove the worst corn in a few days, and as no cure is made that it will cure anything else, it cannot disappoint. If you have hard corns, just try Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor, Kingston, N.C. Putnam & Co., proprietors, Kingston.

Clouds consist simply of water divided into minute globules or drops. They differ in no essential respect from the steam emitted by the hot kettle or the mists and fogs that fill river valleys at sunrise. These forms of water are all produced in the same way.

Crow bars—Shotguns. A good name of Dr. Dorewenda's German preparation for the hair. It really works like magic. All who have used it pronounced it to be unequalled for remedying the loss of vitality of the hair roots, restoring gray hair to its natural color. Just try it. It is first-class. All druggists sell it.

The British Admiralty has resolved to give $20,000 to Admiral Colomb for his invention for flashing light signals.

Mr. J. R. Allen, upholsterer, Toronto, sends us the following: "For six or seven years my wife suffered with Dyspepsia, Constipation, Liver Piles and Kidney Complaint. We tried two physicians and any number of medicines without getting any relief, until we got a bottle of Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery. This was the first relief she got, and before one bottle was used the benefits she derived from it was beyond our expectation."

An Old Quack is it is jet black save its mane, tail and feet, which are milk white.

A man's wife should always be the same especially as they are entirely unlike them in every respect. One trial will prove their superiority. It costs the American people about $1,000,000 a year to stop their teeth.

Nothing impure or injurious contaminates the popular antidote to pain, throat and lung remedy and general corrective, Dr. Thomas' Eucalypti Oil. It may be used without the slightest apprehension of side or other than salutary consequences. Coughs, rheumatism, earache, bruises, cuts and sores succumb to its action.
