New York, Oct. 14.—Ellen McDevitt, sged 33 years, was sent to the Island by Justice McMahon for three months yester-day from the Yorkville Police Court. She was arrested for intoxication on Saturday night. John Ryan, of Corcoran's Roost, was with her, and shared her imprisonment because he was drunk. The woman was carrying an infant 18 months old in her arms, and three other children—Catherine, aged 6 years, William, aged 4 years, and Tatrick, aged 3 years—were trudging wearily along ahead of the couple.

Agent King locked up their history. He found that Mr. and Mrs. McDevitt and her children had lived for five weeks at 315 East Forty-fourth street. They were dispossessed on Saturday morning, and the children had wandered about with their drunken mother til day.

Dispatches received here from Dover, Kent, say that the hurricane was worse than the fearful weather experienced during the blizzard of March last.

The military camp at Shorncliffe suffered from the storm, buildings being partly or entirely unroofed. At Sunderland the hurricane unroofed a factory, the chimney of which fell upon a house and seriously injured four parsons.

A temporary theater erected at Wilklingborough was blown down. A large andience had barely left the building when the accident occurred.

Loss of Life.

The list of vessels which foundered during the gale is only beginning to be made out. Two coasting vessels, it is known, have foundered in Loch Long, a branch of the Firth of Clyde, and six men of their rews were drowned.

Margaret, the infant, was found to be in Adying condition from neglect and want of proper nourishment. She was sent to Bellevue. A neighbor named Mary Warner told Agent King that Mrs. McDevitt, while drunk on Friday, had tied a rope about the necks of two of her children, Catherine and William, and had tried to hang them, but was too drunk to succeed. McDevitt is a clerk in a grocery at $$ per week. Yesterday the children were sent to St. Agnes' Home.

CASPER, Wyo., Oct. 14.—Dr. Joseph Benson, confined in the county jail for drunkenness, set fire to the building, and was burned to death.

HOLYGATE, Ohio, Oct. 14.—On Monday night Mrs. Frank Burke was murdered by her cousin, Roy Burke. Young Burke had been working for Mrs. Burke gave Roy $160 to deposit in the bank, but he spent the money for liquor. He was brought back, and awaiting his opportunity shot Mrs. Burke dead. He then placed the revolver to his own head and alsew his brains out.

PARTYISM IN CANADA.

Hon, David Mills on the Recent Revelations at Ottawa.

An Ill-Founded Cry Ably Met by the

In the course of his able address at the demonstration in honor of Mr. Lister, the member for Bothwell (Hon. David Mills), said: Mr. Chairman, permit me at this point to notice the lamentations occasionally heard over the evils of party, as if the discreditable transactions which have recently been in part, and only in part, brought to light, were due to the existence of political parties in the State. We have, too, been told that party in the State is as much out of place as it would be in a Christian body. I hambly submit that those who speak and write in this way have not taken the trouble to seriously consider the subject. Like Sheridan's friend, "they do not think," but are content to "think they think." What is a political party but a number of men united together to promote some reform, to uphold some principle, or to pursue some line of policy upon which they are agreed? When a great principle through its instrumentality is established, it is secured by the continued existence of the party through whose agency its success was obtained. There is nothing in government that is absolutely secure against overthrow. The price of liberry is unceasing vigilance. It has been beautifully said that liberty is of heavenly birth and will not dwell with those who do not reverence her. Without party you cannot protect her, you cannot maintain those firstitutions in which she takes up her abode, neither anyon, without party, secure the future well-being of the nation. (Cheers.) Parties are proud of their history, of their achievements, of their services, of their sufferings, of their sacrifices. They give stability and continuity to the institutions of a free people. Now let me ask you

WHAT IS A CHRISTIAN DENOMINATION but a party called into existence and continued in existence for the preservation and propagation of the Christian religion? What are its doctrines and dogmas, in the estimation of those who hold to them. Date propagation of the Christian religion?

What are its doctrines and dogmas, in the estimation of those who hold to them, but divine truths made known to men, important to the well-doing and well-being of portant to the well-doing and well-being of men here, and absolutely necessary to enable them "to navigate the sea of life, and gain the coast of bliss securely"; doctrines and dogmas which should be believed, understood and studied until they become a part of our existence? If upon the subject of the Christian religion there was no difference of belief, all Christian professors might be of the same denomination. If men refuse to know or to reflect upon every problem of life upon which profound thinkers have been unable to agree, you will withdraw from an immense field of thought, which must thereafter remain an unknown land. You have not thereby added to the stock of thereafter remain an unknown land. You have not thereby added to the stock of knowledge, or stimulated mental activity, or cultivated mutual toleration. You will have made a retrograde movement by which the field of human investigation will have been lessened. The quiet which comes from such a course is not due to progress but to repose. Our business is to tolerate, not to suppress, differences of opinion. Our rivalries may be active without being malevolent. They serve to wake us up to renewed efforts and stimulate us no fresh exertions in favor of our own conceptions of what we owe to God, to our country, to our neighbors and to ourselves: As so I say Christian Denominations are Parties in Christendom as certainly as political Farther than this, when the great parties have honest aims in view, it is not necessary to go. I will not say that in the heaf and the passion of party strife men may not be carried farther, but so long as the aims are high and honest the contests are, on the whole, invigorating and not ungenerous.

than this, when the great parties have honest aims in view, it is not necessary to go. I will not say that in the heaf and the passion of party strife men may not be carried farther, but so long as the aims are high and honest the contests are, on the whole, invigorating and not ungenerous.

But I do not intend what I now say either as an apology or a defense for the usurping maranders who engage in the strife, not in the service of the country, but their own; who are not concerned about the justness of the quarrel or the fairness of the instead of the dight—men who butcher the wounded, desert the unprotected and betray the dying. They study political geography that they may better take the road that leads to the treasury, where, by a brudent use of money and a profuse display of patriotic zeal, they can long continue in possession of power. (Cheers.) With regard to the PARTY STRIFE AND PARTY AGITATIONS which the lovers of tranquility constantly deplore, let me say that they are but evidences of vital forces within the State by which it may rid itself of those disorders which otherwise might prove fatal. They are not frightful commetionsofthe elements, but necessary agitations, by which impurities are eliminated and health is restored. They do not occasion conspiracies or promember for South Grey warmed up the audience with his genial remarks and good-humored anecdotes. One old Scotchman ties are eliminated and health is restored. They do not occasion conspiracies or proscriptions. They drag conspiracies to light. They can never be dangerous to any but evil doers. If they are evidences of a coming storm it is because there have long remained hidden great disorders, which, if not cured, must destroy the nation. We make no war upon the State, but upon the vampires who have fastened themselves upon it. We have vowed before God and the people that an honest use shall be made of the public moneys, and that public theft and fraud shall be stamped out. We declare that the two great parties shall stand upon a footing of perfect equality, and that no office shall be bought or sold, and that no moneys shall be taken from the public treasury to vary the judgment that the people at the elections are called upon to give.

But we are told that the one party is as give.

But we are told that the one party is as bad as the other. Well, I do not propose to judge a whole party, but I do arraign at the bar of public opinion the conduct and policy of the Administration. I am not bringing tothat bar the Local Ministry or the Local Legislature of any Province; they are not within your jurisdiction or mine. I do not intend to be turned from my purpose, nor do I intend to divert you from your duty by arraigning other than those connected with the Parliament of Canada. I say to you now that the man who in the say to you now that the man who in the say to you now that the man who in the say to you now that the man who in the say to you now that the man who in the say to you now that the man who in the say to you now that the man who in the say to you now that the man who in the mill of Postmaster-General Haggart.

Mr. Armstrong M.P. for South Middle-sex, spoke as a farmer to farmers. His advocacy of the Libera! Principle of reciprocity and exposure of the present system of monopoly was warmly indorsed by the large audience.

Four of the M. P.s present represented constituencies gerrymandered in 1882, with nected with the Parliament of Canada. I say to you now that the man who in the face of the charges made and the misconduct brought to light the last session inveighs against both parties is taking sides with wrongdoers. (Theers.)

the object of making them safe for trade restriction. Dr. Landerkin has always carried his riding, despite the machinations of his enemies, though this year he very nearly had his majority stolen from him by some rascally doings after the close of the polls. Mr. Gibson carried Lincoln that had been gerrymandered to the order of the notorious Rykert. Mr. McGregor represents North Essex, which was held by a strong trade restrictionist, by an enormous majority. Mr. Campbell, M. P. for Kent, has the distinction of rescuing another gerrymandered constituency from the domination of the friends of monopoly. The gerrymander, despicable though it was, is of no use when once the people are aroused to their true once the people are aroused to their true interests.

Mr. Sutherland, member for North Oxford, the Clan Chief, is one of the most popular members in the House. He has a vigorous style, that if turned to account more frequently in platform discussions would effect much good.

duct brought to light the last session invests against both parties is taking sides with wrongdoers. (Cheers.)

A PARALLEL CASE.

What would you say of one who should enter a court of justice and say in defense of a felon, My lord and gentleman of the jury, you ought not to try and punish the accused. He may have been proven guilty, and may be amendable to punishment, but you are all like him if you had the opportunity; there is not one of you who would not do the same thing. What worries you and leads you to bring this charge is that he has been more successful than you. Would you not say that the man who seriously argued in this way was in principle and in character no better than the fellow, and that his influence and his principles made him the abettor of crime? You are not asked to judge the whole House of Commons and to condemn them in vague generalities. Here are specific charges which have been investigated. What say you upon the facts brought to light? Here are specific charges as grave as were ever brought against Ministers of the Crown, and the accused say that they shall not be inquired into, the truth shall not be known. We say that large sums of money were paid to contractors, which an honest and capable engineer says was not due to them, and tens of thousands of dollars of the money so paid was returned and became a part of moneys used as an election fund; and the majority asy, "We shall resist any inquiry by the House into these matters." This was the reply of Ministers to my honorable friend. What do you say—what ought the Conservative party out of Parliament to say to this? Are they prepared to approve of them and of the course taken? (Cheers.)

WOMAN'S PLACE AND WORK Mr. Campbell, M. P. for Kent, who made a phenomenally short address, is one of the best all round representatives in the House. He does not speak often, but when he does he is listened to, for he invariably says something worth hearing. He has a thorough knowledge of the farming industry, and he never fails to point the moral that when they are prosperous the perchants and manufacturers are prosper. merchants and manufacturers are prosper-ous. Reciprocity he regards as a powerful aid to prosperity, and so do his con-stituents.

The speech of Hon. David Mills in defense of modern government by a responsible Government, faced by a watchful Opposition, was commended on all sides. That the colleagues of Lambton's former member is a favorite in the historic county was shown by the warmth with which the immense audience cheered Dr. Landerkin's meed of praise to
