Ugliest Woman In World Married On Personality

Don't be surprised if your clocks suddenly stop this week. They may have stopped for the homeliest woman in the world is in town.

She is Mary Ann Bevans of the Johnny J. Jones exposition. The homeliest woman here from Toronto and, when seen by an Advertiser representative, waved a letter and a telegram triumphantly in his much I make as the homeliest woman in the world and imagine I would be fool enough to fail for their silliness."

A glance at Mrs. Bevans will convince you that her title of the "homeliest woman in the world," is well earned. Her face is out of all human proportion being much too broad and much too long. However, beauty, as the wise men say, is only skin deep. The truth of the aphorism is illustrated by the fact that this unsufferably homely woman is a widow with two children.

At the first sight of the homeliest woman in the world, the first being held last year at a farm in the vicinity of Port St. Stanley, the reunion held last year in honor of the golden anniversary of Captain and Mrs. W. Berry of Port Stanley, and it was decided to make the event an annual affair.

People are here from all over Canada and the United States for the event. It is expected that there will be a present. The president of the association is Miss Anna Gibson of Detroit, and the vice-president is Mrs. Gordon George of Stanley.

The ceremony will be served by the English Church Guild at 6 o'clock in Crest Inn. The proceeds of the dinner will go to the English Church Guild.

But Mrs. Bevans, in her own words, "couldn't stand the old fellow." She said she had been married once and did not relish another experiment in matrimony.

"After my second proposal I've had a change of heart," she said, "without a touch of pride in her voice. Of course I harbor no illusions regarding the man, but I don't want a man who keeps in their offices having me down."

The writer's chief aim has been to show the Canadian farmers struggling through organization toward self expression, and toward an adequate defence of their industry. The attitude of the organized farmers on the tariff is considered as an evolving process, and special stress is laid day and Friday, September 17 and 18, and today is to embrace visits to the Ingersoll, Wood, Galt, Preston, Kitchener, Stratford and St. Mary's, the night being spent at Preston.

While those who participated in the banquet taking in Mitchell, Listowel, Wingham, Ingersoll and Exeter were heartily in favor of a second trip, the officers of the chamber are anxious that the next tour be even more representative than the last. Not only more representative but more ambitious since the hearty receptions accorded the "tourists" on the previous tour have proportioned to the comparatively small number availing themselves of the privilege of taking in the tour.
