A MARGUERITE WEDDING.

Blithner-Martin.
A most happy event occurred yesterday morning when Mr. Woldemar Blithner, Professor of Music, Hellmuth College, was married to Miss Letitia Martin, sister of Mr. Thomas Martin, Director of Music. The felicitous event took place in St. Anne's Chapel, Hellmuth College, the Dean of Huron officiating, assisted by the Rev. E. N. English. The students had decorated the chapel most exquisitely with the College flowers, marguerites, and did everything they could to make the surroundings charming. The chapel choir, consisting of young ladies, dressed in white, with bouquets of marguerites, met the bride at the door, and escorted her to the chancel to the strains of the bridal march Wagner's "Lohengrin." The chorus from Wagner's "Lohengrin." The bride looked very charming in a travelling costume of gray, and carried a beautiful bouquet of bridal roses. The sister of the bride acted as maid of honor. She was attired in a fawn-colored gown, and carried a bouquet of scarlet carnations. Mr. George B. Sippi acted as groomsmen, and the bride was given away by her brother, Mr. Martin. During the ceremony, the organist, Miss Ida English, played subdued harmonies, and at the conclusion the choir sang "The voice that breathed o'er Eden." As the bridal party came down the aisle, their path was strewn with marguerites by the students, and the organ pealed forth Mendelssohn's wedding march. Showers of rice and good wishes followed the happy couple as they left to catch the train for the west. Among the handsome presents received by the bride was a beautiful set of solid silver salt collars presented by the ladies and students of the college. Many visitors were present from a distance and it was freely remarked that the occasion was the prettiest wedding they had ever witnessed.

THE SYNOD OF HURON.

Rev. Mr. Brown hoped the deficiency should be made up without reducing the stipends of the clergy. He was in favor of more special efforts being made to increase the revenues. He believed money should be wanted to send some one after it. A special effort should be made to wipe out the See House debt.
Mr. Jenkins would be very delicate about inquiring into the work and attention to duty of the clergyman, but when it was seen that several missions neglected to take up the collections and obey the laws of the Synod, it might, in fact, account for the stringency. There was first two things to do—either the revenues must be fostered and increased or the expenditures must be cut down.
Rev. Mr. Short criticized some of the expenditures of the Synod. The vote of $300 on $400 for printing officer some time ago, who had been better paid than almost any clergyman, was not encouraging.
Mr. Moore criticized the expenses incurred in the management of the funds.
Mr. Barley spoke in a similar strain.
Mr. Dwyne suggested a system of assessment.

Mr. Dymond said the Diocese was a missionary area; several fields were yet unopened, and the position of affairs was such that if His Lordship had the gentleman ready they could not afford to employ him. The mission fund was suffering by gentlemen who were pensioners on the fund and, who, if they had no success in raising the charges up to a point a little nearer self supporting, it was their bounden duty to go elsewhere. The committee sometimes made assessments, and the duty of the missionary agent a few years ago was successful, and why not try it again?
The working up of rundown mission fields was a meritorious work and deserved hearty support.
Rev. R. D. Cooper said in the U. S., as in Canada, the rural population was falling off and the cities increasing. The clergy were between two fires—the people said they preached nothing but money, while the standing committee said they did not half attend to the money part.
Mr. James Woods, of Gal., ridiculed the idea of telling people they were too poor to pay this or that of the church. Get the people to stand up from above and the money would come.
Mr. Noble, of Petrolia, Rev. Evans Davis and others finished the debate, and the cause was finally adopted.

HURON COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT.

Annual Closing Exercises Yesterday.
The annual commencement of Huron College was held yesterday afternoon on the College grounds. On the invitation of the Bishop and Faculty, the members of the Synod and their wives visited the College and its extensive premises from 5 to 7 o'clock. The Bishop presided, and on the platform erected for that purpose were seated with the Bishop the Rev. Principal Miller, Rev. Professor Williams and the members of the Council, including Dean Innes, Canons Hicks, Davis, Smith, Hill and Richardson, Messrs. Cronyn, Bayly, Hellmuth and Clarke, and Mr. Jenkins, of Petrolia.
After the opening exercises the Bishop addressed those present on the subject of the institution under whose auspices they were assembled. His Lordship alluded to the fact that more room was required for the increasing number of students and more men were needed for the work of the Church in the Diocese. What was wanted was earnest, practical sympathy with the work, and he trusted that liberal subscriptions would be forthcoming for the purpose. The College was instituted in 1864, and had done a good work, but he felt that it was only the beginning of better things for the College and that in due course a faculty of arts would be established. He commended the institution to the prayers of all. His own reason for strongly urging the claims of the College was that the Gospel of Christ was taught in all its simplicity, and on this account deserved the hearty support of the members of the Church in this Diocese.
Mr. Chas. Jenkins, of Petrolia, felt honored by the invitation given him to speak from that platform. He reminded his hearers that a theological college was not only for the purpose of developing the intellect. All must be subordinate to the great necessary call from the Master Himself. The answer given by Christ to Nicodemus: "Ye must be born again," applies in our day as much as in that day. And with regard to students, all their life before leads up to this, and all their life after leads from this. Science has done much, but it could never regenerate the soul. The proper furnishing of the minds of these going forth to preach was a very important matter, and the question was how to bring it about. There is no State help in this country, but we must depend upon the voluntary offerings of the people. The Church in this Diocese was largely interested in this college, and should sustain it as heartily as possible, and see that the teaching power was strong and effective.
Mr. Jenkins then spoke of the consolidation of the Church of England in Canada. The Bishop had alluded in glowing terms to the great work accomplished by that great statesman, Sir John A. Macdonald, in the unification of the Provinces. And he had as great faith in the consolidation of the ecclesiastical provinces as the late Premier had in regard to the several parts of the country when their union was undertaken.
The distribution of prizes then took place, many valuable sets of books being handed by the Bishop to the successful students.
The Rev. W. F. Brownlee then read the vote of thanks passed to me at the last monthly meeting. The ladies of that Board, like many other kind friends, tar overboard; the little I was able to do in helping further a Home which has ever will be such a merciful hand of rest and quiet to many a friendless sick and needy one. I do indeed regret I have been unable, through want of time and bad health, to give more personally and in my hearty sympathy in the work of the Home, although circumstances have at least for a time severed my connection with the Board, I shall always take a very great interest in the Home, and trust that day by day our loving Father will lead the hearts of many to take an interest and help in the good work. I shall ever look back with very happy memories to the short time I had the pleasure and privilege of working with those who have so energetically and faithfully given both time and money to help on the London Convalescent Home.

The Convalescent Home.

A special meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Convalescent Home was held at 444 York street, at 11 a. m., Tuesday, 16th inst., chiefly to make arrangements for the annual meeting on the first Thursday in July, and for a garden party to be given in its interests by the friends of the Home on Tuesday next, 23rd inst. There were present Messrs. Boomer, Labatt, Niven, Bremner, Bullen, Edge, W. J. Reid, Hopkins, Barker, Willis, McCallum, Mrs. Dr. Leacock (American Consul), and Miss Street, Assistant Secretary. A strong committee was formed for flower and refreshment tables, lighting the grounds, &c., &c. The kindness of Mr. Labatt in granting the use of the grounds of "The Pines," Dundas street, and of Col. Smith in giving the services of the beautiful band of "D. Co.," were gratefully acknowledged.
A vote of thanks was passed to the Young Men's Society of Christian Endeavor for the interest its branches have manifested in the Home by holding services, first, St. Paul's and St. George's, and secondly that of the Congregational Church, each of which has left a gift of lovely flowers, and St. Andrew's Presbyterian branch promise a service also. A beautiful letter from Mrs. Ford was read and deeply appreciated. It is as follows:—
"Please convey to the President and Board of Management of the Convalescent Home my sincere thanks for the very kind vote of thanks passed to me at the last monthly meeting. The ladies of that Board, like many other kind friends, tar overboard; the little I was able to do in helping further a Home which has ever will be such a merciful hand of rest and quiet to many a friendless sick and needy one. I do indeed regret I have been unable, through want of time and bad health, to give more personally and in my hearty sympathy in the work of the Home, although circumstances have at least for a time severed my connection with the Board, I shall always take a very great interest in the Home, and trust that day by day our loving Father will lead the hearts of many to take an interest and help in the good work. I shall ever look back with very happy memories to the short time I had the pleasure and privilege of working with those who have so energetically and faithfully given both time and money to help on the London Convalescent Home."

LOCAL NOTICES.

At Newmarket, Tenn., Saturday, a cloudburst did great damage. A number of houses were carried away, and all the crops along the creek bottom lands destroyed. Considerable stock was drowned, but no lives were lost.
To grow broom corn requires rich and clean land. The plants grow so slowly while small that if the soil is full of weed stalks, it is a great labor to care for the crop. The stalk of broom corn is of little or no value as feed, and the price of its hull or brash varies greatly with seasons and demand. Where help can be obtained cheaply in winter to make up the crop into brooms, a good profit can be generally obtained for it. The crop is one of the few in which the grower can also combine the profits of the manufacturer.
In cultivating any crop it is important that the plants should be in a straight line as possible. A little jag repulsive care to prevent knocking out a hill, and, in any event, where there are many such in a row, a wide space must be left without cultivation except as laboriously done with the hoe. When the cultivator can be used to good advantage very little hoeing will be needed. Even with rows of corn it is better to use the hoe to cut out weeds that the cultivator cannot reach, than to try to cover them with earth with the cultivator.
It is a great pity that more orchard grass is not grown. It is slow in establishing itself and fully occupying the land if sown alone, for the grass, however thickly seeded, has a tendency to come in lumps. But it is the best kind of grass to sow with clover, either the common red or alsike. It is in perfection for cutting at the same time with clover, which timothy grass never is, causing loss by cutting one or the other too late or too early, as neither clover nor timothy are in best condition at the same time.

BUSINESS NOTICES.

Florida bitter oranges for marmalade—A MONTJOY City Hall. A12v

The common single horse cultivator is not much used in growing Western corn. Instead of the old practice of going twice in each row to cut close to each side of the hills, the two horses straddle the rows, and the man holding the implement has to look sharp to cut so as to same the corn, and yet bring the teeth of the implement as close to it as possible. Certainly these two horse cultivators do good work while the corn is small. At the west corn is laid by when it gets about knee high, and usually the field gets very weedy before the crop is harvested. For late cultivation a single horse cultivator, taking the centre between the rows, is the only practical way of clearing out weeds.

On any land woodchucks often become a serious pest. It is not merely because they can dig in sand more easily, but it is naturally underdrained, and the woodchucks are less in danger of being drowned in winter, when they are comparatively helpless. A family of woodchucks will eat as much clover as a Jersey cow, and their holes covered with clover around them are pitfalls where many a horse's leg has been broken. Digging out the vermin is slow work, but by stopping all the holes except one, or better still by building a fire at the mouth of each, and when fairly burning covering it up, carbonic acid gas will sink to the bottom of the hole and kill every living thing. The holes should then be carefully filled with earth, to prevent danger to horses' legs.
