THE BETTING BOOKS AT WHITE'S AND BROOKS'S.—In these singular volumes, which still exist, may be found bets on all conceivable subjects—bets on births, deaths, and marriages; on the length of a life, or the duration of a ministry; or a rascal's risk of the halter, or a placeman's prospect of a coronet; on the chances of an election, or the sanity of the king, or the shock of an earthquake, or the last scandal at Ranelagh, or Madame Cornely's, or man dropped down at the door of White's, he was carried into the house. Was he dead or not? The odds were immediately given and taken for and against. It was proposed to bleed him. Those who had taken the odds the fact the fairness of the bet. Walpole has a good story of a parson, who, coming into White's on the morning of the earthquake of 1750, and hearing bets laid whether the shock was caused by an earthquake, or the blowing up of a powder-mills, went away in horror, protesting they were such an impious set, that he believed, "if the last trump were sound, they would bet puppet-show against judgment." One Mr. Blake betted £1,500 that a man could live twelve hours under water; hired a desperate fellow, and sunk him in a ship by way of experiment. Neither ship nor man re-appeared. "Another man and ship are to be tried for their lives," adds Walpole, who is our authority for this story, "instead of Blake, the assassin." There is a glut of Circassian girls now in the Constantinople market, and the price of handsome ones has come down from $500 to $25.
