The Supplemental Lessons

The Superintendent and teacher will probably speak to you about the Supplemental Lessons, which The General Assembly's Sabbath School Committee have arranged with a great deal of care, and which are to take a little piece of the teaching hour.

"What," you exclaim, "more lessons?" Yes, and no. The Catechism will continue just as before, only that after this year, we shall take three years instead of two to go through it. Instead of the Memory Verses from each Sabbath's lesson, there is a carefully selected series of passages, each one complete in itself, and every one of them gems of Scripture: the scholar is rich who has them all in his mind. Then there is to be Bible Drill—finding places, repeating the names of the books, learning what is in each book, and becoming acquainted with the chief persons and places and events of the Bible in their order, so that you can find your way through comfortably from Genesis to Revelation. A new hymn is to be learned each quarter, chiefly by singing it; and there is to be a question on missions each Sabbath, with its answer, the question and answer being so simple and plain as to be understood at sight, and easily learned.

The Bible drill looks the hardest. You will really find it delightful, but it will be given in very small morsels, a little each Sabbath; and it will be like studying the geography of a country by travelling in it: there is no more delightful way.

The Question on Missions has its practical side. It is to be taken up, in the first place, that teachers and scholars may come to know more about missions. But if the knowledge be of the right sort, it will not end with knowing. There will be doing, also. Probably there are some right within reach of the school who need mission work to be done among them, some neglected poor or careless rich. And then there are our great Home Mission fields, wide as the continent itself; and beyond—the great world waiting for Christ's gospel. Shall we not send it, or take it?
