Dr. Chase's Ointment Cured When Baby's Body Was Covered With Distressing Eczema.

If every mother could try Dr. Chase's Ointment for the chafing, skin irritation and resulting eczema which tortures so many babies, what a blessing it would be for the little ones.

This letter will give you an idea of what a wonderful work this Ointment is doing in the way of bringing comfort to children who are so unfortunately afflicted with eczema. It is so easy to contract eczema, and so difficult to get rid of, that it is a certain number of babies who are afflicted with this terrible disease. After trying all sorts of ointments the disease continued to spread until it covered the entire body.

When the itching became bad he would scratch himself and his mother would find him in his cradle covered with blood. Hearing about Dr. Chase's Ointment I bought two boxes and before a certain number of days the itching had stopped and the child was cured. That was a year ago, and there has been no trace of eczema since. I recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment to all who suffer from eczema as being the best treatment in the world for itching skin diseases.

FURS IN SUMMER BECOMING A FAD

White Fox Will Be Worn During the Warm Weather.

FUR TRIMMED SUITS Will Be Popular With Ruffs of Feather and Marabout.

Fur is to be worn in Toronto this summer. For the past few weeks enterprising devotees have sauntered forth on breezy afternoons in charming tailor-made dresses of fur-trimmed suits. White fox promises to monopolize the place of honor for a few weeks at least and already many fur-trimmed gowns, gay garden parties and open air lawn bazaars have been attended by fashionably dressed women wearing handsome stoles of this attractive white fur.

There are a number of popular designs in neck pieces. A dainty ruff collar-like throw, fastened on the left shoulder with rosettes and smart streamers of white satin ribbon, and a high belted coat, introducing several Norfolk features. The deep bands were of white fox, fastened on the outer seam of the sleeve with novelty black and white buttons. A modish neck piece which fastened at the back was worn and the black and white effect was further maintained by the chic little torpedoes that in black and white side lace, oxfords and the swirl striped sunshade.

A decidedly stunning tailleur recently seen was fashioned of a pronounced black and white shepherd's check, exhibiting a plain short circular skirt and a high belted coat, introducing several Norfolk features. The deep bands were of white fox, fastened on the outer seam of the sleeve with novelty black and white buttons. A modish neck piece which fastened at the back was worn and the black and white effect was further maintained by the chic little torpedoes that in black and white side lace, oxfords and the swirl striped sunshade.

The obedience of children is often made difficult by parental uncertainty. It is sometimes forgotten that obedience is a virtue for which the co-operation of two persons is essential; one to give the orders, the other to carry them out. The initial condition is a judicious, firm and well-considered giving of orders. Nothing is so demoralizing to a gang of workmen or to a band of soldiers as a series of hasty, ill-advised and contradictory commands. With all the willingness in the world the sense of distrust which is thus awakened suggests disobedience.

The trouble with many children who seem not to know how to obey is that their parents do not know how to command. The orders are given hastily and changed readily on petition. Even an unwillingness to obey is made sufficient reason for withdrawing the injunction. Some of the discipline of young children is as foolish as the mother who says in answer to the question "why?" "Because! And you know Johnny, that when mother says 'because' she always means 'because'!" The child quickly perceives that the parental discipline has no more sense in it than that. The disobedience which once is a fair expression of obedience begins with respect. But respect is forfeited when it is made plain that the commands are not intelligently given.

GERMANS RESTRICT MEALS AT HOTELS

Police Order Spare Serving of Roast Meat and Potatoes.

BERNE June 1.—As a result of certain Berlin hotels and restaurants having been too lavish with food for the public the police authorities jointly with the Berlin Hotels and Restaurant Association, have decreed that from tomorrow no regular luncheon or dinner menus shall be drawn up, but that everything shall be served à la carte. Vegetables will be served lavishly, but roast meat sparingly, while portions of potatoes must be reduced to absolutely a minimum. It has also been decided that neutral newspapers, not pro-German, shall be excluded from the restaurants and hotels. Already a certain number of rich Germans have rented Swiss villas or gone to Swiss hotels owing to the badness of the German war bread.

TROUBLE STARTED ON BOARD SHIP

Well-Known New Brunswick Man Fell in a Faint.

Suffered for Years Afterwards But Finally Found Relief and Permanent Cure in Dodd's Kidney Pills.

MELROSE Westmoreland Co., N.B. June 1.—(Special).—R. S. Clarke, a member of a well-known New Brunswick family, has made a statement for publication which deals with his cure of a very complicated case of kidney disease.

"The first intimation I had of kidney trouble occurred while on board the steamer in English ports. I was then fourteen years ago when I fell in a faint on the floor.

"After my arrival at St. John my health became poor and I lost 20 pounds in weight. Year after year I became weaker. I suffered from heart trouble and nervousness and I became irritable and dyspeptic. My sight troubled me and my walk was unsteady as I suffered from dizziness.

"Reading a circular led me to use Dodd's Kidney Pills and Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets about June, 1913, and my improvement began at once. My strength came back in my legs. The dizziness left me, my bowels became regular and by New Year's, 1915, I claimed I was cured of Diabetes.

"I would not be without the Dodd's Medicines on any account."

Marsh Marigold Gatha Palustris.

Altho gatha palustris is usually known to wild flower lovers by its everyday name, marsh marigold, yet strange to say, this plant is not a marigold. Nor is it a cowslip, altho called by many country folk the swamp cowslip.

You will find marsh marigold growing in swampy places, in low lying marshes, along the edges of cool ponds and the lush banks of slow-flowing rivers, or in little back-edging pools off from the main streams. Wherever shines the golden cup there you may be sure of water, or very moist land.

A stout, succulent herb, with tough, hollow stem abounding aloft great clumps of single ann often tootle cups of buttercup-golds, glossy and shining wax in the early morning sun of March, April and May, there are no other early wild flower of the swamps so beloved of the children.

The blossoms of the plant are so beautiful, altho so large that a closer study will repay the casual passerby. From two to four inches across, they are borne in loose terminal clusters of from 10 to 15, on the rather thick light-green blossom stem, standing all of ten inches above the rest of the plant.

Long ago our Indians described this golden blossom as the "Flower that blossoms in the cool swamps," calling it "Ondagaga." It has been claimed for many hundred years that this same plant is the "kingscup" immortalized by English poets both modern and ancient. Under this name, however, we Canadians do not know it. To us the marsh marigold is the marsh marigold.

The delightful thing about the plant is that it can be brought in from the swamps with almost no trouble and transferred to your own water garden with ease. Given a quiet spot with plenty of still water, some slushy soil in which to grow its sprawly roots, and a ray or two of sun occasionally, the marsh marigold asks no better fate, whether diving in the still recesses of a shady cove or in a manufactured lily pool, tho it be made out of an ordinary everyday wooden tub. No water garden can pretend to be a water garden without a clump of wild marsh marigolds, so hie you out to the swamps some day soon and commence your lily pool by bringing to it a healthy cluster of these homely aquatic.

Tomorrow we shall speak of the arrowweed, a wild swamp flower that grows in hundreds almost everywhere in Canada, and is a valuable addition to your little flower pool.

J. C. Galt—Many thanks for your kind words. We do try to be as much of a help to others as this department can. Now have the aquatic in mention on our list for a special article in this series. I am glad you are able to tell me that your specimen brought in last year, after reading the articles in the "water garden series," grew, and is already getting ready to bloom this summer. It is always cheering to the readers of this column to have any of yourselves state definitely that they followed hints from this space, and reaped a certain success. It is an incentive for others to try anyway. Indeed, this column has been busy for many long months hinting to its readers that the beautiful things around us everywhere only need to be looked for with an appreciative eye. We all miss too many of the lovely things in nature.
