

- Chap. X. Of the fitting old Ships of War to lye end on, and to batter Castles, Forts and Batteries
Page 46
- Chap. XI. Of small floating Batteries to batter an Enemy's Castles, Forts, &c. Page 49
- Chap. XII. Of the Utility of old Ships of War, when fitted as described in the IX and X Chapters
Page 54
- Chap. XIII. Of the means Britain has to take or demolish an Enemy's Sea-Ports, and destroy their Ships in Harbour Page 63

PART II.

- Chap. I. Of Fortility Page 73
- Chap. II. Of new Methods to fortify Places Page 79
- Chap. III. Of a new Method to fortify re-entering Angles Page 96
- Chap. IV. Of fortifying a Circle Page 101
- Chap. V. Of a new Method to make Covert-ways and Walls in fortifying Places Page 115
- Chap. VI. Of Foundations, and the Manner of laying them in Fortifications, Bridges, and Piers for Harbours Page 122
- Chap. VII. Of the Length of Arch-Stones Page 164
- Chap. VIII. Of Rivers, Creeks and Harbours; and making proper Use of the Flux of the Sea
Page 170

APPENDIX.

- Chap. I. Of manning the British Navy with less Grievance to the Subjects Page 182
- Chap. II. *Contains a Scheme to employ Seamen;
and also treats of a Copper-mine near Hudson's Bay; and of a Scheme to discover the North-west Passage, or determine there is no such Passage;
with Cautions and Directions.*