A SKETCH OF THE ENTRAILS OF
THE HUMAN BODY.

The primary agent in the circulation of the blood is the heart, a large muscle situated in the left side of the breast, (thorax or chest,) and endowed with great irritability. In the first rudiments of animal life, even before the brain is formed, the punctum saliens, as it is called, points out the embryo heart in miniature, & marks its primaeval irritability as a sure presage of its future importance in supporting the vital motions. As this singular organ exhibits irritability the first, so it never relinquishes it until the last; whence
