ECONOMIC LEAGUE

OF ALLIED NATIONS

Lord Robert Cecil Adopts

Wilson's Test for Germany.

MUST END MILITARISM

For Admittance to World

Trade Enemy Has to Change Rulers.

London, July 14.—An economic association of 24 nations comprising the entente allies already in existence, declared Lord Robert Cecil, British under-secretary of state for foreign affairs and minister of blockade, in a comprehensive statement regarding the world's trade after the war which was issued today.

Whether Germany shall eventually be admitted to this economic association, declared the British minister, will be determined by the test established by President Wilson, when the president said on Dec. 4 that if the German people should still, after the war was over, "continue to be obliged to live under ambitious and intriguing masters interested to disturb the peace of the world," it might be impossible to admit them to the partnership of the nations or to free economic intercourse.

Lord Robert described this statement by the president as a definition of the qualifications for membership in the association of nations and added: "To these declarations we give our warmest assent."

He concluded with the expression of the hope that the time was not far off that the allies would meet at the council board to discuss in detail the economic association which will combine the resources of the civilized world in the joint work of reconstruction and the restoration of prosperity.

In opening his statement, Lord Robert said:

"I have been much interested in the series of addresses and discussions at the recent meetings of commercial associations in the United States, such as the American Association of Commerce and Foreign Trade, and the American Chamber of Commerce, which have been held in the last few months. The tone of these discussions seems to show clearly a desire for settled arrangements for mutual help between all the nations now associated in the war against Germany. These are also our feelings in Britain, and I should like to make some acknowledgment of the recent utterances of prominent American commercial men by trying to describe roughly the state of British policy at this moment in regard to such matters."

"The resolutions of the Paris economic conference have been much discussed during the last two years. When they were written we had an alliance of eight nations, six of whom had suffered the immediate ravages of war. The world outside, including the United States, with its vast resources, was neutral, and normally, at the conclusion of peace would have sold its products where they would have fetched the most money. To borrow the words of the recent inter-allied labor conference, all these vast resources would have gone to those who could pay most, not to those who would need them most. The Paris conference was a defensive agreement of those then engaged in the war to secure the peace against starvation and unemployment during the period of reconstruction and to provide for the restoration to economic life of the ravaged territories of Belgium, Poland, Serbia, France and Italy."

"These objects retain all their old importance. They are simple measures of self-preservation. It is for example, still essential that we should forestall the aggressive efforts of the central powers to use their money power to snatch on the morning after the war the fruits of the peace and the battle of liberty and justice remain unaltered, the alliance of eight has expanded into the association of 24 nations of which President Wilson spoke in his recent address to the Red Cross. It is no longer a question of forming some narrow defensive alliance, but of laying down the economic principles which are already in existence, and to membership of which we are committed."

President's Principles.

"What are these principles to be? The president has stated them in memorable words. On Jan. 8 he advocated that the world should be able to all economic barriers, and the establishment of an equality of trade among all the nations consenting to peace, and the president spoke in the maintenance. On Dec. 4 he had already defined the qualifications for membership in this association of nations, and the importance of which have been rendered doubly evident by all we know of the policy of domination, exploitation and exclusiveness introduced by Germany into all her peace treaties, and forced by her upon the allies. In that speech he considered what would be the situation if the world were to 'should still, after the war was over, continue to be obliged to live under ambitious and intriguing masters interested to disturb the peace of the world,' it might be impossible to admit them to the partnership of the nations or to free economic intercourse."

"To these declarations we give our warmest assent. But do these declarations necessarily mean that we—the associated nations—should adopt no protective tariffs and no international competition in trade after the war? No. Everyone is agreed as to that. In the words of the program of the inter-allied labor conference 'the right of each nation to the defense of its own economic interests, and in face of our obligations hereinafter mentioned, to the conservation of a sufficiency of foodstuffs and materials cannot be denied.'"

"Each member of the association of Nations may have to protect its citizens in one way or another after the war, but our aim must be a comprehensive arrangement of liberal intercourse with all members of the association by which each one of us, while preserving his own national security, may contribute to meet the needs and aid in the development of his fellow members. Nor, of course, can our arrangement for mutual assistance exclude all competition, for we are most anxious that co-operation should be the keynote of our commercial relations. Our feelings in this matter cannot be better described than in the words of Mr. James A. Farrell to the Foreign Trade Council, namely: 'The sacrifices that are being cheerfully endured today by the nations in foreign commerce, in the necessary curtailment of their business thru the conservation of shipping are an earnest elevation of the world's method and of purpose which will control the conduct of our external trade in the future.'"

Germany Sole Obstacle.

"There is but one obstacle to this economic Association of Nations. That obstacle is Germany—the Germany described by President Wilson in the words which I have already quoted. Germany living under ambitious and intriguing masters. You have seen the provisions of her commercial treaties in the east, and with the groups of peoples from the Arctic Ocean to the Black Sea. Her economic policy towards these groups is absolutely contrary to our principles. That policy began by systematic and
