selling and bookmaking in the State is dead.

An unusual scene occurred at Auteuli, France, one day last week in connection with the Prix de Passy. After the numbers of the five horses had been hoisted, the police suddenly stepped into the ring and ordered the bookmakers to stop betting, much excitement prevailing. The leading pencillers were called before the stewards, and, after considerable discussion, the authorities allowed wagering to continue. The reason for the sudden interference is not forthcoming.

The Stratford Club has decided not to accept the invitation of the Osgoode Hall-T.A.C. combination to play another match in Toronto. There is nothing to be gained, the boys say, by accepting the challenge. The Toronto hockeyists are smarting under the defeat they sustained at Stratford, and have all sorts of excuses to offer. If Stratford defeated them a second time there would be just as many new excuses. Besides the Stratfords made Queen's a liberal offer to play another match in this city and the Kingston team declined. The local enthusiasts, therefore, see no reason for the team going to Toronto.—Stratford Beacon.
