announced to-day that he has successfully received by wireless telegraphy, at the station on Signal Hill, messages from the station recently erected near the Lizard, in Cornwall, England. These messages, Mr. Marconi said, were received on Wednesday and Thursday afternoons. He had arranged with the Cornwall station that the letter "S" was to be signalled at 6 o'clock in the evening, which would be 2.30 here, and signals were received on Wednesday and Thursday, tho no signal came yesterday or as arranged on Wednesday and Thursday, tho no signal came yesterday or

"When the kite elevated the wire to a height of 400 feet above Signal Hill on Wednesday a number of signals, consisting of the letter "S," which signal was ordred to be sent from Cornwall, were clearly received on Signal Hill by the receiving instruments. We again received the signals perfectly on Thursday.

"The signals were obtained only when the kite was up to a considerable height. For some reason, yesterday nothing was received, and to-day we could not get the kite up on account of the weather. It has been blowing too heavily every day for balloons, which would be best to experiment with.

"The success of these tests will alter my plans. I intend to suspend further tests with kites and balloons for a short time and erect a large station here at a cost of $50,000 baying towers or masts for supporting wires. here, at a cost of $50,000, having towers or masts for supporting wires. This, of course, provided there is no governmental or other objection. This will necessitate my going back to England at the end of next week, in order to have the necessary equipments sent here, with suitable transmitting machinery and other requirements.

"By this time I hope to have the Cape Cod station in working order" recently.

St. John's Nfid., Dec. 14.—(New York Herald despatch.)—Mr. Marconi again, so as to complete a regular triangular service. No doubt the success of my experiments here will couse a sensation in telegraphic circles, and many will find it difficult to believe it.

"I myself had very little doubt as to our ultimate success, but I thought

"I hope, in the course of a few months, to have a system of direct communication across the Atlantic in working order, and it can then be easily ascertained whether the discovery is of practical use for commercila and other purposes. I have no doubt in the matter, but I am content to wait and let events prove that I am correct in my belief.

"The instruments I have at present are extremely sensitive, and I am of the opinion that, in order to make the signals absolutely reliabe, it will be necessary to arrange for more power at the sending station in Cornwall, which I will arrange for on my return to England.

Mr. Marconi's company about a year ago decided to put up two very large stations, at a cost of $70,000 each, at Cape Cod, Mass., and near the Lizard, in Cornwall, England, the object being to ascertain how much an application of a large amount of power would increase the practical distance by which it is possible to communicate by wireless telegraphy.

The stations in Cornwall and Cape Cod consisted of heavy machinery and 20 poles, 210 feet high, supporting a large number of vertical wires. The station at Cornwall was practically destroyed during a heavy gale in September, and was ony partially renewed. It wil not bge completely repaired for another two or thre months. The Cape Cod station was also damaged
