Portry.

Don't Stay Late to-Night.

The heart of home is heaving
With rays of light;
And lovely eyes are gleaming
As falls the shades of night;
And while thy steps are leaving
The circles pure and bright,
A tender voice half grieving,
Says, "Don't stay late to-night."

The world in which thou movest
Is busy, brave, and wide;
The world of her thou lovest
Is at the angle side;
She waits for thy warm greeting;
Thy smile is her delight;
Her gentle voice entreating,
Says, "Don't stay late to-night."

The world, cold and inhuman,
Will spurn thee if thou fall;
The love of one poor woman
Outlasts and shames them all;
Thy children cling around thee,
Let fate be dark or bright;
At home no shaft will wound thee;
Then "Don't stay late to-night."

SPEAK NOT IN HASTE.

Time to me has taught—
"Tis a truth that's worth revealing—
More offend from want of thought
Than from any want of feeling.
If advice we would convey,
There's a time we should convey it;
If we've but a word to say,
There's a time in which to say it.

Many a beautiful flower decays,
Though we tend it ever so much;
Something secret on its petals
Which no human can touch.
So in many a lovely breast
Lies some canker grief concealed,
That, if touched, is more oppress'd—
Left unto itself, is healed.

Oh, unknowingly, the tongue
Touches on a word so aching,
That a word or accent wrong
Pains the heart almost to breaking.
Many a tear of wounded pride,
Many a fault of human blindness,
Has been sought or turned aside
By a quiet voice of kindness.

Time to me this truth has taught—
"Tis a truth that's worth revealing—
More offend from want of thought
Than from any want of feeling.

How the "Times" was sent to Paris.

The long columns of announcements in the London "Times," intended for friends in Paris have for some time been a frequent subject of remark, and people have wondered what chance there was of their ever reaching the eyes for which they were meant. The means adopted for this purpose are as follows:—Three pages of the paper which contained communications to relatives in Paris were placed in great care by the London Stereoscopic and Photographic Company on pieces of thin and almost transparent paper, about an inch and a half in length by an inch in width. On these impressions there could be seen by the naked eye two legible words, "The Times," and six narrow brown bands representing the six columns of printed matter forming a page of the newspaper. Under the microscope, however, the brown space becomes legible, and every line of the newspaper was found to have been distinctly copied and with the greatest clearness. The photographs were sent to Bordeaux for transmission, thence by carrier pigeons to Paris. When received there they were magnified by the aid of the magic lantern, to a large size and thrown upon a screen. A staff of clerks immediately transcribed the messages and sent them off to the places indicated by the advertisements.

A French physician has investigated the effect of smoking on thirty-eight boys, between the ages of nine and fifteen, who were addicted to the habit. Twenty-seven presented distinct symptoms of nicotine poisoning. In twenty-two there were serious disorders of the circulation, indigestion, dullness of intellect and a marked appetite for strong drinks. In three there was heart affection; in eight decided dyspepsia; of blood; in twelve there was frequent epistaxis; ten had disturbed sleep, and four had ulceration of the mucous membrane of the mouth.

London sent out 450,000 valentines, this year.

Acting Co. Treasurer.
St. Andrews, April 12, 1870.

Ravages by Wild Beasts in India.

The Government of Bengal has sent to the Government of India a report of the war in the province against wild animals and snakes, and the Malabar Government has a like report on alligators—a menacing one it now appears, to the great terror of the people, in one district, which has lost by alligators a man, thirteen head of cattle, and fourteen buffaloes during the year. The government pays ten rupees, nearly £1 English, for every alligator above eight feet and a half long killed on the coast of Malabar. The Bengal Government has much greater trouble. In the Burdwan district about thirty thousand rupees were paid in a short time for the destruction of poisonous snakes, though only two and a half (34) were paid for each. In Behar the wolves are the principal pest, and the Government has to fight against a popular belief that any village where a wolf's blood is spilt will have ill-luck. Not only, there, do the people not enroll themselves on the side of the Government against the wolves, but they actually take the side of the wolves against the Government, and this in spite of a fearful loss of human life from wolfish depredations. At Chung Bhakar several herds of wild elephants have been devastating the country for two years, while the authorities have been differing as to whose business it is to attack them. Some action, however, is at last to be taken. And so with tigers, which have been allowed to multiply upon the people, till it is now very difficult to check them.

OUTPLANKED.—A gentleman of Halifax, being at a ladies fair, not long since, and being invited to buy something, by a fair creature who kept one of the tables, said he wanted to buy what he feared was not for sale—a lock of her hair. To his surprise and delight she promptly cut off the coveted curl and received the price of ten dollars. The happy purchaser was exhibiting his trophy to one of his friends, who very shrewdly blessed his joy by saying, "She rather outplanked you, for to my certain knowledge, she only paid three dollars for the whole wig."

COURT OVER THE MERCIES.—Count the mercies that have been quietly falling in your history. Down they come, every morning and evening, as the angel messengers from the Father of Heaven. Have you tried these mercies, wasting mercies, renouncing every day, and never yet realizing whence they came? If you have, Heaven pity you. You have murmured under afflictions, but who heard you rejoice over blessings? Ask the sunbeam the rain drop, the star, or the queen of the night. What is life but mercy? What are health, strength, friendship, social life? Had each the power of speech, each would say—"I am a mercy." Perhaps you have never regarded them as such. If that you have been a poor student of nature and revelation, what is the propriety of stopping to play with a thorn bush when you may just as well pluck sweet flowers and eat pleasant fruits?

ARE YOU THERE MOTHER?—A mother, busy with her household cares, was obliged to go into an upper room, and leave two little ones alone for a time. So she gave them books and toys to amuse them, which answered very well for a while. But by and by the house seemed to grow so still and lone some, they began to be afraid. So the eldest one went to the foot of the staircase, and calling with a timid voice said—

"Mamma, are you there?"
"Yes darling," said the mother, in a cheerful tone.
"All right then," said the little one, more to herself than to her. "She went back to her plays for a time. After a while the question was repeated, with the same answer and the same result."
"Oh, how often, in our loneliness and sadness here in the world, we forget that God still is overhead. But if we only send up prayers to him, we shall ever get a comforting and quieting answer.—[Presbyterian.]

An aristocracy of wealth is the most irrevocable, the stiffest of any social distinction, and yet it is that which many of our citizens, many of our otherwise sensible young people are fostering and trying to establish. It is quite too fashionable to sneer at labor, and give the cold shoulder to those who are not ashamed to do their own work, or whose circumstances compel them to do it. If we are to have an aristocracy at all, let it be one of brains and character, and not of purse and dancing school poise. When that happy day shall dawn, when the true woman and the true man, are in their proper position in the social world, the highest scale will be those who know how to work, and when necessary, are willing to work, while the brainless and purposeless snobs of both sexes will sink by the weight of their own ignorance.

If a man or woman, a "gentleman" or "lady" is able to live without actual manual labor, let them be the first; it is a pleasant position to occupy; but to be ashamed of the knowledge sufficient to manage the shop or kitchen, the store or the house, to be ashamed to work, and to sneer at those who do work—this is evil, and to day it is an abomination in our best society. A woman, was your mother ashamed of work? And young man in kids hand clover, did your father get his competence on which you live by idleness? We honor the woman who, when necessary, does her own work, and despise those who sneer.—[R. F.]

A REMARKABLE LARKNESS.—A fine one of our neighbors, Louise, was a very bright little girl. It chanced one day that she had, as a guest a minister, and she seemed to him as a Little Annie watched him very closely, and finally sat down beside him and began to drag on her sleeve.

What are you doing, Annie? asked the clergyman.

Be making your picture, said the child.

So the gentleman sat very still and she worked away earnestly for a while. Then she stopped and compared her work with the original, and shook her little head.

I don't like it much, she said. "Taint a great deal like you. I dess I'll put a tail to it and call it a dog."

Fancy her feeling! what a likeness there must have been!

CONTRADICTORY FOR BOTH SEXES.—For the girls: Could you love a man who were false to his word when he had enough of his own? Who painted his face and improved his form as you improved (?) your? Who pinched his feet with small shoes, his hands with small gloves, his waist with corsets; and then as if he had, already deformed him, if enough, tied a huge bundle to his back and thrust tiny mountains of wire into his bosom? For the boys:

Could you love a girl who defied her month with tobacco and lead, the air with fumes of cigars? Who staggered home several times a week the worse for liquor? Who indulged in fast horses, but high at times, and staggered around the streets with questionable companions?

The Kansas Scheme has passed a bill giving any person a right to sue for damages any one who sold him liquor and used to sue the owner of the building in which the liquor is sold. This is prohibition with a vengeance! Will the people submit to it? Not likely, if they have a spark of public spirit in their composition. What shall the many Legislative bodies do to counterpoise to any man or woman who sells liquor to the people with his lawful license? Do they wish to introduce the baneful use of the knife and pistol? Will they not rather see the provisions of grace and such that the reckless habits cannot overcome, the most depraved hearts cannot be made clean, the most abandoned character can be saved, the most abandoned spirit can be made happy, the most depraved life can be endured, and finally a home in heaven, where all is love, joy, and peace, and can be eternally possessed? Then let her good man, lift up thy tail and head for good deeds and glorious redemption.

Direct, change your mind, confess your sin, and then your conduct, when you are convinced you are wrong, is a man's duty.

A man in St. John, N.B. laughed at a fellow who
