THE HOSPITAL.

All organizations that have to do with the public—or are of a public character—must expect criticism. Criticism is very often unfair, for it is only, as a rule, when someone is smarting under a real or fancied injustice that he becomes a critic, and perhaps an unfair one.

The General Public Hospital has come in for its fair share, perhaps more, of criticism, and there is no doubt that the search light or X-ray turned upon it revealed growths which needed the sharp knife of public opinion to cut them out.

That the public hospital has done, however, a good work, and is now doing better work than ever before, is known to those who have knowledge of the personnel of the staff. The physicians are skillful and painstaking, and try to do their full duty, although there may still be a suspicion that "too many cooks spoil the broth." The nurses are young ladies of education and excellent training, and now that there is a head nurse there is less friction and better system. But red tape, which is far too red and too long in many public institutions is still somewhat in evidence, and might be laid aside to some extent with advantage to the usefulness and efficiency of the hospital.

For example, the new rule which prevents clergymen from visiting the hospital without a permit save on days when it is open to the general public is one that will not be popular with either the clergymen or the patients who desire to see them. As a matter of fact, clergymen do not desire to visit the sick in hospital when there are other visitors present. They are accustomed to visiting the sick as a part of their pastoral work, and it will be readily admitted that they are not at all likely to abuse the privilege extended to them, and therefore should be permitted to visit those patients under their spiritual care whenever they are able to do so. It would probably be found on investigation of the record of ministerial visits that there had been no such rush of clergymen as to give rise to serious apprehension on the part of the hospital staff, and the fact that a man is a clergyman ought at any time to be the only permit required at his hands. It may be assumed that the average St. John clergyman is a fairly busy man, who has many calls to make and much to occupy his time. He ought not to be an unwelcome visitor when he goes on a pastoral mission to the sick, whether to home or hospital, at any hour of any day.

THERE MAY BE TROUBLE.

Hon. Mr. Blair's telegram to President W. M. Jarvis, of the board of trade, suggests that there is some danger of the maritime provinces being sacrificed in the Grand Trunk Pacific affair. Mr. Blair says:—

"I believe that in case the government gives financial assistance the Grand Trunk Pacific will be obliged to enter into a satisfactory traffic agreement binding itself to hand over at Quebec its ocean winter traffic to Intercolonial or build a line through to a maritime port. Have been doing everything possible to bring this about."

It will be observed that this statement is one of personal belief, but not of positive assurance. It admits that there is strong opposition to be overcome. It may yet be necessary for Mr. Blair, Col. Tucker and other lower province members to place their resignation in the hands of the government, to enforce the claims of this part of the country.

UNSAVORY NEWSPAPERS.

The Pennsylvania legislature has adopted a bill relating to libel which is said to be quite stringent in its provisions. It is designed, in the words of the governor of the state "to guard against negligence and lack of care on the part of the publishers of newspapers and prevent some practices which should have been stopped long ago." Some of these practices he thus sets forth:

"Within a few days in a leading article on the first page of a daily journal under large headlines, upon a rumor of unknown source as to the name of a suggested appointee to the position of prothonotary of the supreme court, when no appointment had been made and no utterance, official or otherwise, had emanated from any member of that court, that high tribunal was subjected to a covert assault upon the words 'machine' after control of the supreme court.' A mayor of our chief city has been called a traitor, a senator of the United States has been denounced as a 'Yokel with sudden brain' and within the last quarter of a century two presidents of the United States have been murdered and in each instance the cause was easily traceable to inflammatory and careless newspaper utterances. No self-respecting people will permit such an attitude to be long maintained. In England a century ago the offender would have been drawn and quartered and his head stuck upon a pole without the gates. In America today this is the kind of arrogance which goes before a fall."

The governor further says that if "such abuse of the privileges allowed to the press is to go unpunished, if such tales are permitted to be poured into the ears of men and to be profitable, it is idle to contend that reputable newspapers can maintain their purity."

He also says that many years experience on the bench has led him to the conclusion that crimes are widely propagated, not by the malice, but by the recklessness of the press and that in certain classes of cases, among them murder, the accused were at times convicted or acquitted before they reached the court room.

This is a very severe arraignment, but there is certainly good ground for it, as applied to a section of the press of the United States. The mania of sensationalism has reached its highest development in that country, and in the fierce competition between newspapers the question of the accuracy of statements made does not receive very much consideration. The governor of Pennsylvania, it will be noted, does not however, confine his censure to the newspapers. He recognizes the fact that the work which he denounces is made "profitable," for which the people themselves are directly responsible. A newspaper is a business proposition, and depends for its existence upon the degree of favor with which it is received by the public. The more unscrupulous the publisher is, the greater lengths he will go to satisfy the public craving for the sensational. Libel laws are useful in dealing with journals of this class, but are not likely to be prohibitive until public sentiment is far more pronounced against such newspapers.

Any attempt to stir up an agitation against the acceptance of the Carnegie library should not be permitted to succeed. If Andrew Carnegie is a crank St. John need not emulate the example. If he betrays colossal ignorance of Canada, that is a matter for regret, but is no crime. Carnegie made his millions by the same methods employed by other business men, and now he is scattering his wealth broadcast. St. John has accepted a portion of it. Let that settle it. To do otherwise would be an act of mere childishness.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE.

A KIND OF HOG.

To the Editor of the Star:

Sir—There appears to be a new species of hog amongst us and it is a wonder that some of our would-be naturalists have not endeavored to collect and identify him.

In order that he may be recognised, the following is given:

He visits the post office, opens a letter box, takes out letters, which latter he reads without changing his position, often compelling several other box-holders to wait until he is through before they can get their mail.

Will some one name him and will the name be Letter-hog, Box-hog, or Mail-hog?

BOX-HOLDER.

THE OLD BURIAL GROUND.

To the Editor of the Star:

Sir—Will our city fathers ever wake up to a realization of their shameful neglect of the old Burial ground? It was once the most important of those in power and also many of our ordinary citizens should take a little interest in the resting place of the remains of those who in years gone by and without present comforts and appliances carved out of the forests and slates the first of our noble city, of which latter we are all so justly proud.

Could the good old British-to-the-core Loyalists return to earth, what a sound of trumpets would be heard and what a grand reception would be given them by our common council, but they are gone, never to return, and the mere mention of the fact that their remains are contained in that plot known as the "Old Burial ground" has awoke in all loyal citizens of St. John a determination to do all in their power to prevent that spot from becoming a mere series of short cuts between graves.

Where are the stones that once marked the resting places of our illustrious predecessors in the western society of the ground? It seems but right to answer that many were removed when the disgraceful attempt was made to place a monument in the south-west corner and that others disappeared in order that a short-cut might be made from the southwest corner of King and Sydney streets to the main path running from Sydney to Carmichael streets.

Well do I remember the indignation of all Loyalist descent and of their determination that the monument should not be erected in what was to them a sacred spot. All who visited the excavation the day after the implements and material had been thrown therein, had no doubt as to the final result and the whole affair probably served as a warning to the officials that the project was at once abandoned and the monument placed where it should be—in the square.

Since this display of feeling on the part of many of our good citizens, several persons, presumably of unsound mind, have proposed the erection of bandstands, library buildings, etc. on this historic spot, but owing, no doubt, to the better judgment of some, those foolish ideas have been abandoned and the ground still appears as a burial ground, but with many of the stones missing, and those that remain defaced or broken. Some day, when it is too late, our city fathers and the public generally will wake up and see a frightfully severe attack of loyalty and endeavor to secure glass cases or some such sort of protection for the few stones that remain. American citizens engaged in burying ground and being advised that there rest the remains of those who gave up their all on account of their love for the British flag and institutions, must surely feel that the descendants of the Loyalists are indeed "an inferior set of people."

Some of our older citizens would visit the spot referred to, look well at the surroundings and compare the present appearance with that of say twenty or thirty years ago. I think they will be dumfounded and will agree with me when I say that the present condition is a shame and a disgrace. It may be all right to shout and howl a welcome to returned loyal "Soldiers of the King," but no such can we offer to the descendants of this city by the sea," who return not, but we can show that we possess at least a little of the good old blood of the departed by keeping their graves and the stones that mark them in at least good order.

Cannot something be done to attain this end?

EQUITY.

Her other armament consists of four 12-inch guns, four 9.2 inch guns and 24 small guns. The new battleship's speed is to be 18.5 knots per hour, and she will carry a crew of 755 men.
