

THE GLORY DEPARTURE. The darkness of night in the midst of the day Hath failed to cover the gorgeous array. And the aspect is changed from a scene that was bright.

For the beams of the morning are shadowed in night. The night is fallen, their pride is laid low, And the verdure of summer is snow.

O, man, in the midst of thy glory and pride, Note the hand of the clock, or the ebb of the tide, And the glory departeth, the substance hath fled.

That thy joys are but earthly, and cannot remain; That thy griefs are but those of a passing pain; That thy life is but a vapor, that soon will be gone.

For thy joys are but earthly, and cannot remain; That thy griefs are but those of a passing pain; That thy life is but a vapor, that soon will be gone.

A Gallant Painter.—Gilbert Stewart the celebrated portrait painter, once met a lady in the streets of Boston, who said to him, "Ah, Mr. Stewart! I have just seen your likeness, and it did it kiss you in return."

No injury makes so deep an impression on one's memory as that which is done by a certain military jest; for, even to be ever so good, yet it is always forgiven when it occasions enmity.
