

FREDERICTON SOLDIER SAVES HIS COMRADE

Pte. Jack Markey thanked by mother of boy he saved in France.

Special to The Standard. Fredericton, Nov. 26.—Private Jack Markey of Princess Patricia Canadian Light Infantry, one of the heroes returning to Fredericton from the firing line during the past few days, has since his arrival received a letter from the mother of a member of the Princess Pats whose life he saved in one of the memorable fights which that famous regiment went through about Ypres early in the month of May. It was just at the time that the Princess Pats were so badly decimated when they were almost wiped out of existence that Private Markey performed the heroic act which is now bringing recognition. He was a member of No. 4 company from which volunteers were called to act as stretcher bearers and go up to the first line trenches to carry away the wounded of No. 2 company which had been badly shot to pieces.

Eighteen men were called for and Private Markey was one of the number accepted for this hazardous task. When they got to the front line of trenches instead of being used as stretcher bearers they were called upon to act as reinforcements. Finally when the time came to go out of the trench there were only seven left to leave.

One was Capt. Adamson, who commanded the company and one of the others was Corporal Duncan Fisher, a young Scotchman. He was suffering from four wounds, one bullet having taken away part of an ear and another having paralyzed one of his arms, while he was also shot through the legs. Private Markey put him on his back and carried him to safety through heavy fire. Corporal Fisher recovered from his wounds, but one of his arms is still partially withered. This week Private Markey has received a picture of Corporal Fisher whose life he saved and also a letter from his mother, of which the following is a copy:

Coda Linn, Oban, Scotland, 11th November, 1915. Dear Sir,—Our son Duncan Fisher, P.C.L.I., writes to you for one of his photos for you. He says you are going home so I am writing to try to express his father's and my own gratitude to you for saving our dear boy's life. Had you not helped him when wounded he most likely would have died. We are glad you are getting home to your dear wife and children and we pray God to bless you and them and to give you long life to gether. We trust you will have a safe voyage and find all dear to you quite well. Again thanking you very sincerely, I remain, Very gratefully yours, JESSIE S. FISHER.

FUNERAL OF BOY SCOUT YESTERDAY

Many fellow remains of Earle Merritt to last resting place.

The funeral of Earle Merritt, son of Mr. and Mrs. Merritt, of Seely street, who was drowned in Lily Lake last Wednesday morning, was held yesterday afternoon and was attended by many friends of the family. The boy has been a member of the St. Paul troop of boy scouts, and the procession which wended its way from his parents' residence was led by some seventy-five scouts, in full uniform, one of their number giving the solitary beat on his black draped drum, as they passed along. On arriving at St. Paul's church, the scouts, who represented most of the troops of the city, and who had gathered out of respect to their dead comrade, lined up on either side of the doorway, as the cortege passed through, and then took their places in the church. After the service, which was conducted by the Rev. H. G. Alder, had concluded, the remains were conveyed to Fernhill cemetery again preceded by the boy scouts.

Peter Brown vs. Bathurst Lumber Co.—Before Chief Justice McLeod and White and Grimmer, J. J. Chief Justice reads the judgment of the court. Appeal allowed with costs. The case to be referred back to judge of the County Court to hear same on the merits.

Duffy vs. Duffy.—Before the Chief Justice and White and Grimmer, J. J. The Chief Justice reads the judgment. White, Justice, reads judgment. The verdict reduced to $753.01. Appeal allowed to this extent with costs.

The King vs. Polkins ex parte McAdam.—Before Justices White, Barry and Grimmer. White and Barry, J. J., read judgment of the court. Grimmer, J. J., reads dissenting judgment. The conviction was confirmed.

Howard vs. City of St. John.—Before Chief Justice and White and Grimmer, J. J. Grimmer, Justice, reads judgment of court. A special case. Judgment for plaintiff with costs.

This was a special case stated for the opinion of the court as to the construction of an act of last session by which the city sought to impose on agents of companies issuing policies of their companies with a heading over them such as "National Underwriters' Association" an additional tax as if the association were a separate company. Some of the agents complained to the city that by the use of this device other agents obtained more business and the bill prepared by the city was redrafted by one of their members to meet the grievance complained of. It was thought to be effectually. The court held, however, that where these devices do not represent an actual body liable under the policy the agent of the company which is bound by the policy is not liable to the extra taxation.

Talbot vs. Oullett.—Before Chief Justice and White and Grimmer, J. J. Grimmer, J. J., reads the judgment of the court. Appeal allowed. Verdict entered for defendant with costs.

Donovan vs. Excelsior Life Ins. Co.—Before Chief Justice and Barry and Grimmer, J. J. Barry and Grimmer, J. J., read the judgment of the court. Chief Justice agrees, appeal dismissed with costs. This was an appeal from judgment in favor of the company on an endorsement policy for $1,000.

Oliver vs. McDermott.—Before Chief Justice and White and Barry, J. J. Chief Justice delivers judgment; appeal dismissed with costs. Upon the conclusion of the above judgments the court adjourned sine die.
