Under-Currents

By The Duchess

"No it isn't not when you are there to administer it," says Vera who is laughing "Every time I even smile this horrid pain grows worse and you will tell your absurdities. Go away, and let me try to sleep it off."

"Well, do sleep; don't brood over impossible difficulties," says Griselda, creeping obediently to the door.

The troublesome headache chings however to Vera all through the evening and long after night has fallen. Griselda had come up to bed and had scolded her a little for not eating the dainty dinner she had sent up hours before, and then had tried to insist on putting her to bed, an effort Vera had steadily resisted. She could not sleep she said, she would read for an hour or two it was early yet, and so on. The thought of lying down and making a miserable pretence at sleep, when that happy state of unconsciousness was not for her, seemed more than she could bear; and long after Griselda's soft regular breathing told her she was asleep, Vera sat on through the growing night, and sought to soothe her troubled mind by reading.

But now, a gleam of moonlight coming through the open window puts the lamp to shame, and compels her attention. How sweet how heavenly fair, the garden seems, wrapt in those pale cold beams. She can see it from where she sits on the deep cushioned seat of the servants' quarters where a light under Mrs. Grunah's door warns her that that remorseless foe has as yet refused to surrender herself to slumber.

A small door leading into the garden is close to this, and moving swiftly up the narrow stone passage that brings her to it, she opens the door, and so closing it after her that she regain the house at any moment she turns to find herself alone in an exquisite perfume of the night.

The first passing breeze that touches her seems to cool as if by magic her fevered head. The pain dies from her, and with it goes the strange miserable sense of unrest that had driven her forth. A most blessed change it seems, and with light footsteps she moves over the velvet grass, drinking in the sweetness of every flower-filled wind as it goes by her.

Tall pale hollyhocks stand up like ghosts on every hand; the mingled sweets of heavy-headed stocks and the rich crimson clove carnations, sailing the soft air. A faint warm dew is uprising from the sleeping earth.

It is a luminous night, blue-grey where the moonbeam do not fall, and light all through. Far off the ocean is gleaming and it and the sky seek to be of one delicate hue, whilst the tall white cliffs stand out in a solemn splendour from the general twilight of their surroundings. There is a suspicion of mystical weirdness in the half darkness, and a languorous quiet that calms her excited nerves, as she stands here silent as the night itself, breathing great draughts of peace.

Presently she sinks upon a garden seat and half unconscious of how time flies lets it escape her. The intense stillness, the strange wild charm to be found in the thought that she alone of all her present world is awake, that she sits here alone, with all her senses nervously alive whilst the others are sunk in common clumber all add a touch of perfection to what already seems so desirable.

Her troubles drop from her one by one. Surely the earth is full of unborn joys; some must fall to her share. "Lovely flower," she smiles of God's goodness, and here they blossom at her feet. Sure then God will be good to her. Her spirits rise within her, she is breathing back upon the seat the sweet moonlight, and she steps lightly to the moonlight, and with a heart uplifted begins to pace lightly to and fro.

How long she thus gives herself up to the sweet new enjoyment of life she hardly knows. "In golden quiet of the moon" the hours run by with winged feet, and it is not until at last a vague but pleasurable sense of fatigue comes to her that she dreams of time at all. Something else too helps her to this end. From out the ivied tower above the mild hooting of the owls there comes a sound, mellow deep and slow. It is the ancient belfry clock telling the midnight hour. It startles her. Has she indeed been here so long? What if Griselda should wake and be alarmed for her? She moves quickly in the direction of the garden begins to think her pleasant sojourn at an end.

She has neared the shrubberies now, involuntarily turns her glance their way as they lie upon her left; involuntarily too she seeks to pierce the darkness that envelops them, and then—

She stops short, and presses her hand convulsively to her breast. Who is it—what is it, moving there in the mysterious gloom?

DANGER LURKS IN EVERY ONE OF US

We Are As Full of Deadly Poisons As A Germ Laboratory.

AUTO-INTOXICATION OR SELF-POISONING

"FRUIT-A-LIVES" Absolutely Prevents This Dangerous Condition.

The chief cause of poor health is our neglect of the bowels. Waste matter, instead of passing from the lower intestine regularly every day, is allowed to remain there, generating poisons which are absorbed by the blood.

In other words, a person who is habitually constipated, is poisoning himself. We know now that Auto-intoxication, due to non-action of the bowels, is directly responsible for serious Kidney and Bladder Troubles; that it upsets the Stomach, causes Indigestion, Loss of Appetite and Sleeplessness; that chronic Rheumatism, Gout, Pain In The Back, are relieved as soon as the bowels become regular; and that Pimples, Rash, Eczema and other Skin Affections disappear when "Fruit-a-lives" are taken to correct Constipation.

"Fruit-a-lives" will protect you against Auto-intoxication because this wonderful fruit medicine acts directly on all the eliminating organs. 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c. At all dealers or sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-lives Limited, Ottawa.

DRINK HOT WATER BEFORE BREAKFAST

Says you really feel clean, sweet and fresh inside, and are seldom ill.

If you are accustomed to wake up with a coated tongue, foul breath or a dull dizzy headache; or if your meals sour and turn into gas and acids you have a real surprise awaiting you.

To-morrow morning immediately upon rising, drink a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This is intended to first neutralize and then wash out of your stomach, liver, kidneys and thirty feet of intestines all the indigestible waste, poisons sour bile and toxins, thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal.

Those subject to sick headaches, backache, bilious attacks, constipation or any form of stomach trouble are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store and begin enjoying this morning inside-bath. It is said that men and women who try this become enthusiastic and keep it up daily. It is a splendid health measure for it is more important to keep clean and pure on the inside than on the outside because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood causing disease which the bowel pores do.

The principle of bathing inside is not new as millions of people practice it. Just as hot water and soap cleanse and purify and freshen the skin so hot water and a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate act on the bowels, stomach, liver, and kidneys. Limestone phosphate is an inexpensive white powder and almost tasteless.
