The report of Newnham College, which has not been so long in operation, and reaching up only to 1883, is as follows:-

Mathematical Tripos	5
Classical Tripos.	10
Moral Science Tripos	9
Natural Science Tripos	9
Historical Tripos.	11
Total	44

showing a somewhat larger proportion in favour of Natural and Moral Science and History.

These lists show that the women distribute themselves over the honour subjects in the same manner with men, and that their tastes and capacities lead them quite as much to the older mathematical and classical studies as to the more modern honour subjects, the proportion of successful candidates for mathematical and classical honours being in the Girton list, to those for all the other subjects as 52 to 31, and in the Newnham list 15 to 29, or in both 67 to 60.

It is worthy of note that no less than 47 of the ladies in the Girton list had become professional teachers, and most of them in high departments of the profession, while only one is noted as having entered any other profession. This is a fact which indicates the prevailing determination of educated women to the profession of teaching, and the probability that this profession will ultimately fall largely into their hands. I have not the figures for Newnham, but have reason to believe the proportion there is quite as large.

SEPARATE OR MIXED EDUCATION.

In Britain, as in this country, the question of separate or mixed education of the sexes has been much discussed; but in this, as in other matters, the practical and free genius of the English people has set itself to work out the problem in real life, instead of debating it in a theoretical manner, and consequently we find a number of experiments in progress. These may be classified under three heads: First. What is sometimes called in this country "co-education," or the education of both sexes in mixed classes; 2nd. Separate education in colleges specially for women; and 3rd. Intermediate or eclectic methods, in which the two first are combined in various proportions. The co-existence
