Dear Peter:

dropped out of sight temporarily to be groomed for becoming prime minister. I know you understand the importance of image, just as I do. But I don't know about poor old Brian. He seems to be fumbling up there in Ottawa and it won't be long now before the Repub. — er, Conservative party will be looking for a new leader with more savvy. I sure hope that will be you! Just think how fantastic our two great countries will get along when you're finally in power. I just love your selling-out policy!

By the way, smart move to let your flunkie take the rap for the downward trend in the Alberta economy. Brian still hasn't learned how important it is for a leader to distance himself from bad news and scandals. It's best not to know too much so you can't be accused of anything — just like me. After all, Albertans aren't so different from Americans. They're both good sheep with short memories.

So take my advice and Evita's example — get yourself all ready for a radiant comeback on the national stage. Your country, and my country need you!

Looking forward to working together,
Ronny R.

P.S. Do you think they'll ever make a musical about me?

Dear Ronny:

Yes, I'm sure they will. They'll probably call it "Life With Bonzo", and it will be written from the monkey's point of view!

Peter

Dear Peter:

Hi, I've followed your career and your advice for a long time now. I think you're great. I never expected to be writing to you but lately I've hit a real problem, I hope you can help.

You see, I haven't got gobs of money to throw around, but I am desperately in need of some advice. The milk marketing board is suing me for selling my milk on the side of prices below market prices. Seems to me I should be able to market my own moo-juice. What's up?

Flabbergasted Farmer

Dear Flab:

Not much to do friend, the board runs the market, and if everybody sold their milk on the side like you, the middleman (the government) would be out of a job and people all over would get cheaper milk. Clearly higher prices are worth a few jobs, and hey, plants do really well when you milk them.

Pete

Dear Pete:

I need to get real rich real fast. Suggestions?

Desperate

Dear Desperate:

Ontario?

Dear Pete:

I want to own a small business. I've got the money to invest, what do you recommend?

Dripping Dollars

Dear Drip:

Buy a big business and wait a few weeks.

Peter
