

that for historic setting, for inspirational value, and for impressive statement, Dr. Kelley's addresses were second to none in the Empire Day celebrations.

His voice is silent amongst us, but his forceful character abides as a powerful influence with all who knew him. It is with pleasure that I avail myself of this opportunity of expressing my appreciation of the life and work of my late friend and colleague.

ELSON I. REXFORD.

May 30, 1918.