Returning Locators Bring More Indian River Information.

Ledge Grows Broader and Apparently Richer to the Southeast - Many Claims Recorded.

From Wednesday's Daily.) The news of the great quartz find on Indian river, as reported first and exclusively in the Darly Nugget of Saturday, has been productive of a large number of men going out and securing claims on the rich ledge. A number who left Dawson for the scene of the recent discovery, returned to the city this morning somewhat weary, physically, but jubilant and happy over having secured for themselves claims which they lost no time in recording today.

When a crowd of men reached the field on Monday they began to follow the ledge in a southeasterly direction, locating and staking as they went until reaching a rather large creek, a tributary of Indian river, which they crossed and for some time afterwards were unable to locate the ledge which had apparently stopped short at the bank of the creek. A mile further on, however, it appeared at the surface wider and richer in apperance than that formerly traced. Every man in the party selected and located a claim which he recorded today, and the big ledge which causes the district to be accounted a tinges on and on to what limit or extent no man knoweth.

If this find should turn out to be even one-half so valuable as many of the old South Atrican and Australian dian mails made up at the latter office miners who have visited and inspected for Dawson and other places in the Yuit pronounce it the future of Dawson as the metropolis of the greatest mining country known aside from the mythical mines of King Solomon as depicted by Rider Haggard, is assured.

How Peanuts Grow.

Editor Daily Nugget: A bet of $10 was made in Dawson this morning as to whether peanuts grow under or on top of the ground. Please give your knowledge of the subject and A. and B.

(The man who backed his belief that peanuts grow under the surface of the ground wins the money: On every well regulated plantation in Georgia and to visit Ireland came as a thunderbolt Florida several acres of peanuts are planted every year for a fall hog pasture. In Georgia peanuts are called "gubers" and in Florida "pinders." In the latter state where corn is planted The conversation had turned on the in January, the "pinders" are not weather, and Lord Landsdowne replanted until after the corn has been plowed the last time, which is usually warmer, madam, in Italy.' The Queen corn hill the peanuts or "pinders" are usually distinct accents—audible all The Sybil and Victorian were reportplanted and by the time the corn is ready to gather in June the whole surface of the ground is covered with vines very similar in appearance to sweet der crap" has matured and the ground Isle," being very soft and sandy, it is possible to take hold of one vine, pull it out of the ground and find a peck of peanuts on its roots. About the middle of September the "razerbacks" are turned into the ex-cornfield to fatten on the ninders," their snouts being especially adopted to mining for them in the soft earth. When peanuts are harvested like potatoes it is possible to take several hundred bushels from one acre of ground. -ED.)

The Kid's Hair Copper.

In the Madden house, and in the card room of the Orpheum, gloom, dark and impenetrable, is lying around on at least two bank tables in large unweildly hunks.

In the hearts of two gentlemanly dealers in ivory of the above named houses grief lurks and refuses to be driven forth or killed by drowning or otherwise.

The cause of all this anguish has gone down the river. He was a young man, sufficiently so to be designated as the kid. In addition to youth he looked Orr & Tukey's stage came down it was innocent and void of guile. But who can penetrate the mysteries of the buman heart! This youth bad evidently played bank before, and quit looser. This time he decided to win. Now, when a bank player decides before hand to quit winner he generally has something more than an ordinary hunch to may be expected should the high water base decision on. So it was with 'the continue. kid." He had a fragile, almost invisible hair attached at one end to a copper. This copper he artfully placed on bets played behind the queen and eight, with the final result of wresting the bank roll, so it is said, from the Madden house game, witness the verbal EDWARDS & DRLONE, grief of "French Fred," and later of a | c42 large kink in the capital of the game in the Orpheum oresided over by the grief-stricken, though always gentlemanly Mr. Tidball.

The manner and reason of his flitting, so it is smilingly whispered in select circles, was first, an intimation from some true friend that the police had taken due cognizance of the hair, the flying-copper and the large profits derived therefrom, and deemed it expedient that he should, without the blare of trumpets or the light of fireworks, drop down the river sometime not farther remote than four hours. Soon after this intimation had been recorded a keen observer might have discerned, without the aid of telescope, a small boat with a man therein, riding quietly upon the ample and placid bosom of the Yukon. Various estimates are placed upon the monetary value of the Association have arranged for a grand 'kid's'' cargo, which run, from fifteen to twenty-five hundred dollars.

His destination is unknown, but as will live long and prosper.

The Queen's Visit.

There has been a good deal of conjecture on all hands as to whence really came the suggestion of the Queen's visit to Ireland. Apparently it has been wasted. M. A. P. may know little or much on the subject, but it gives the following explanation, at all events, the authenticity of print. It certainly has the merit of simplicity:

"The news of the Queen's intention to her astonished suite. She broke the intelligence both to them and to the royal family with startling abruptness. It happened at dinner in this wise. marked, "I hope you will find it

POLICE COURT NEWS.

It was a brief session held by Police Magistrate Scarth this manning, there being but one case on for hearing—that of a man with an Irish name and Swedish dialect, who was charged with supporting himself by gambling. A plea of guilty was entered, qualified with "Ae never baen gambler before Ae came dase country." The usual $50 and costs was imposed and paid.

On Wednesday of next week George O'Brien will be brought before the police court to plead and be given a murdering Lynn Relfe, which charge was formally filed yesterday. O'Brien has not yet been formally charged with the murder of Fred H. Clayson, but the charge will be filed soon.

The Klondike Booming.

The recent rains have had the immediate effect of raising the waters of the Klondike to such an extent that all freight and passengers will now have to be transferred across the branch running between Dawson and the ferry, hitherto forded, in boats. Last evening when only by the most careful management and persistent effort that a crossing was successfully made. The two or three passengers at one time were expecting to be carried away by the water.

So far freight rates remain unchanged, but an increase in the present tariff
