A PICTURESQUE INDUSTRY.

Gold Washing on the Saskatchewan River by One Who Knows.

The Drolot concessions, referred to in recent press despatches, involve one of the most picturesque industries in Canada, says Korak in The Toronto News. In the beginning of the gold days on the Saskatchewan, odd spots of the sand beach sparkled like corn-meal tipped with frost. The Indian saw it as he paddled in his canoe, but it was all a bit of little sparkle in the rain. The white settlers called it "four gold," silted down from the Far North when the Yukon camps were a dream. He saw a mining proposition at once, and he set up his altar to the god of gold on a sand-bar. He made it himself with an axe, a hammer, a few nails, a sieve and a piece of blanket. When it was established, the idol looked like a half-brother to a magnified coffee-mill and a saw-horse. It was called a "grizzly."

Besides his new commercial idol, the gold-worshipper stood with a tin pail on the end of a pole. He scooped up the watery gravel, and dumped it through the present grizzly. The stones ran into a heap and the fine sand sifted through on the blanket. In one scoop might be one grain of gold. Splash - garri - up with the gravel and down with the stones, went the pail, perhaps the only sound in miles of solitude, and the patient miner the only moving figure. The stones heaped into a cairn at his feet, and the floury sand clogged up on the blanket. Here and there in the blanket silt at sundown, when the miner's shack-scope began to curl out of the poplars, a microscope might have detected a grain of gold. And when the "grizzly" hermit got it separated out by a mercuric process learned from a book, he had perhaps two dollars' worth of gold - if he had kept that splash - garri! steadily going to the swing of his elbows.

This was the poor man's privilege on the upper reaches of the Saskatchewan till the Drolot concession came into vogue. Then sixty miles of the river, and the present Edmonton were leased by the Government to Drolot as a monopoly. The picturesque "grizzly" with its unkempt worshipper and his pole-pail shoved off down the river.

Long before the "grizzly" had begun to develop into the dredge at least three stages of evolution were gone through before the present grizzly on a barge was put into the gold-washing business. The modern gold dredge - three of which played on the Saskatchewan at Edmonton in 1901 - is simply a manifold big grizzly in evolution. Instead of the miner's pole-pail scoop are twenty-three iron buckets on an endless chain. In place of the wire sieve is a huge revolving perforated cylinder, as big as a locomotive boiler. For the miner's arms a huge steam engine.

The dredge is stationed on a sand-bar and moored by cables to the shore. The chain of buckets climbs round on its endless splash-scooping the sand, and as each bucket passes the perforated cylinder it dumps its load of watery gravel. The stones pass on out at the rear. The sand sifts through on to a series of slanted tables till it finally lodges in a blanket. There it is separated by a secret process - the sand from the flour gold. And a $1,200 nugget comes up, it probably won't happen again all summer; but the crew, as they "grab-pile" in the houseboat alongside, and bunk in the cabins on the dredge, talk about that nugget as though it were a Kohinoor diamond.

These gold-dredges are clumsily picturesque. But to the traveler on the lower Saskatchewan the sight of the "grizzly," run by a lone some half-breed miles away from any living biped except the birds and his shadows, are the monumental picture of a strenuous and now somewhat pathetic past. The dredge makes more noise; but the grizzly's splash - garri! is one of the loneliest sounds in the Lone Land.

FAMOUS INVENTOR DEAD.

Straight Pull Rifle James P. Lee's Great Triumph.

James P. Lee, whose death took place at New Haven, Conn., recently was spending the winter there, and it was not generally known in Galt that he was seriously ill. The distinguished inventor only returned to Galt five years ago, after a long residence in the United States and Europe. His name will be inseparably connected with the inventions in small arms which have been the basis of most of the recently-adopted weapons.

He was born in Hawick, Scotland, and came to Galt with his father, George Lee, when a boy of five years. Apprenticed to his father, he became an expert watchmaker, but, being an ardent sportsman, he early became interested in firearms. When at Janesville, Wis., in 1854, he first began his study of guns, bringing out an idea he did not perfect for many years later, when it appeared in the Lee straight pull rifle, which was first used in active service during the Spanish-American war.

The first magazine gun which Mr. Lee invented was purchased for the American navy, where it has been in use ever since. In the seventies Mr. Lee went into the manufacture of side carbines and sporting rifles in Milwaukee, and later had his inventions handled by the Remington Arms Company.

In the early eighties he went to England and laid his rifle before the British army authorities, who took it up and furnished the whole army with Lee-Modifieds. The Government afterwards adopted a new bore for the rifle barrel, changing the name of the weapon to the Lee-Enfield.

Mr. Lee was 78 years of age, and had been a sufferer from an accident which befell him when a youth. By the accidental discharge of a gun he was shot in the heel, and he carried many of the grains for over 50 years, until the discovery of the X-ray machine.

CHAMBERLAIN'S COLIC, CHOLERA AND DIARRHOEA REMEDY.

The uniform success of this remedy has made it the most popular preparation in use for bowel complaints. It is everywhere recognized as the one remedy that can always be depended upon and that is pleasant to take. It is especially valuable for summer diarrhoea in children and is undoubtedly the means of saving the lives of a great many children each year. For sale by All Druggists.

Too Much Praise.

A man attended a dinner given by a witty woman and ate ravenously. "The greatest praise I can bestow on your dinner," he said, "is to eat heartily." "But your praise amounts to flattery," the woman replied.

All Druggists will refund your money if you are not satisfied after using Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It is everywhere admitted to be the most successful remedy in use for bowel complaints and the only one that never fails. It is pleasant, safe and reliable.

The Talent of Success.

Believe me, the talent of success is nothing more than doing what you can do well and doing whatever you do without a thought of fame. If it comes at all, it will come because it is deserved, not because it is sought after. And, moreover, there will be no misgivings, no disappointment, no hasty, feverish, exhausting excitement - Longfellow.
