Pain Across the Kidneys For Three Years.

Suffered Great Agony. Could Not Stoop or Bend.

No disease is so quiet and stealthy in this approach as kidney disease. That is why it is so dangerous. It may become edeep-seated before you realize the danger. It is therefore of great importance to recognize the early warning symptoms, because in its early stage kidney disease is easily curable. Pain or dull ache in the back is one of the first signs. So are abladder pains, bearing-down pains, smartthe back is one of the first signs. So are bladder pains, bearing-down pains, smarting sensation when urinating, frequent or suppressed urination, and gravel or seediment in the urine, etc. You cannot be well if your kidneys are not performing their functions properly. It is a common fallacy to imagine that the crime of forgery consists in signing another's name, though, in fact, committing any forgery consists in making and uttering any false instrument in writing with attempt to defraud; thus, it may be a forgery to omit a word from a document, and it will be a matter of considerable surprise to many to learn that it is possible for a person to forge his or her name. A person, however, who fraudulently inserts another's name on a picture, thereby selling it as the work of some other artist, is not guilty of forgery, as a picture is not an "instrument in writing."

'The crime of perjury also does not ''fet is' with the generally ac-The crime of perjury also does not quite "fit in" with the generally accepted idea, which is that if a person, after being sworn on oath to speak the truth, swears falsely he is guilty of such offence. This is correct with the important qualification that the fact the witness has sworn to must be material to the case. Thus, if a witness on being duly sworn gave a false address on being asked where he lived, this, though untrue, would not amount to perjury, as the idace where the witness lived would be quite immaterial. That a person may be guilty of perjury, though speaking the truth, may

We must not conclude this article We must not conclude this article without a short reference to a comparatively recent case in which a man, not possessing the means to pay, entered a restaurant, where he ordered and ate a good dinner; as, however, he was unable to pay for the same he was given in charge, and subsequently indicted for "obtaining goods by false pretences." The case resulted in the prisoner's acquittal on the ground that he had not been gullty of any false pretences.

The lucky individual, therefore, had a good meal on the cheap, but we should not advise any enterprising reader to emulate his example, as, although he could not indeed be prosecuted, it seems that he will still be criminally liable under the Bankruptcy Act for obtaining credit by fraudulent means.

Field Arrived. After Eugene Field's return from his first trip to Europe, where he "spent his patrimony like a prince," and before he went to Denver, he had a little close personal experience with hard times. One day he walked into a leading St. Louis hotel and, squaring himself before the register, inscribed his name in his well known, copperplate chirography. The clerk had never heard of him, but he read the name with a quick glance and said:

"Do you wish a room, Mr. Field?"
"No," was the answer.

"Dinner?"

"No."
"Then may I ask what you do

A writer on flamingoes, which he has studied in their haunts in the Bahamas, says of them: "They are prob ably as near to the geese as to any other order of birds, having a similar structure of bill and feet and somewhat similar feather character. They are unique, however, in their curiously bent bill, which, though gooselike in general economy, is constructed in every detail upside down, as the bird in feeding reaches down to the bottom and places the top of the bill down. The tongue is also constructed in same inverted way. The webbed feet are for sustaining the birds In the soft ooze they love to feed in, acting like snow shoes."

FIRST OF ARMY NURSES. Florence Nightingale's Work—Founder of a Great Movement That Celebrates

October 24th marked what may fairly be termed the jubilee of nursing, says The London Daily Telegraph. It was on that date that Miss Nightingale set out upon her great mission to the Crimea, starting at her own request in the most absolute privacy and quiet, but in the knowledge that she possessed the fullest confidence of the country as the knowledge that she possessed the rullest confidence of the country as to her ability to carry out the great nission she had accepted, though uone could have foreseen the farreaching results in the bettered care of the sick that were to follow it. Only five days earlier—off Oct. 19—the official announcement of her conthe official announcement of her en terprise appeared in the newspapers in the following terms: "We are authorized to state that Mrs. (sic) Sightingale, who has been for so time acting as superintendent of Ladies Hospital at No. 1, Upper Harley street, has undertaken to organize a staff of female nurses, organize a staff of female nurses, who will at once proceed with her to Scutari at the cost of the Government, there to act under her directions in the English Military Hospital, subject, of course, to the authority of the chief medical officer of the establishment."

Miss Nightingale celebrated her eightieth birthday in May, 1900, when she was the recipient of counteightieth birthday in May, 1900, when she was the recipient of countless congratulations, and a singularly interesting presentation was made to her. This was an album containing the signatures of no fewer than 650 ladies who had been trained either at St. Thomas' or at the Notting hill Infirmary for Poor Law duties, and including the names of two of the original probationers of, 1860 and nurses then at the front in South Africa, from most of the colonies, America and Russia. In the address 'accompanying it the nurses said: "We rejoice that you are still able to see some of us from time to time, and to take so lively a personal interest in our work. We feel grateful to you, not only for the benefits which you have conferred upon us individually, but also for having by your example and wise direction created a noble calling for women generally."

It is pleasant to record that Miss Nightingale is in health quite as good as that which she has enjoyed for many years past, and that her interest in all that concerns the nursing profession is unabated. She is, showever, seldom equal to the fatigue

But she asked to decline it for motion of nursing education mately, as the outcome of this public-spirited determination the Nightingale School and Training Home for Nurses was established in connection with St. Thomas' Hospital, and was opened in 1860. All its original rules, which have needed very little modification, since wice very little modification since, were drawn up by her, and this may be regarded as the parent institution of the many splendid training schools that have arisen in more recent years. In the sixties and the earlier seventies it was difficult to induce ladies of refinement to come forward for instruction as nurses, but a few of strong convictions and undaunted courage did so, and the influences in these early days set a very high standard of devotion and competence

Let it prove that it does what medicine cannot do. See what a tonic it is. Learn, that it does kill germs. Then you will use it always, as we do, and as millions of others do.

This offer itself should convince you that Liquozone does as we claim. We would certainly not buy a bottle and give it to you if there was any doubt of results. You want those results: you want to be well and to keep well. And you can't do that—nobody can—without Liquozone.

Its effects are exhilarating, vitalizing, purifying. Yet it is a germicide so certain that we publish on every bottle an offer of $1,000 for a disease rerm that it cannot kill. The reason is that germs are vegetables; and Liquozone—like an excess of oxygen—is deadly to vegetal matter.

There lies the great value of Liquozone. It is the only way known to kill germs in the body without killing the tissue, too. Any drug that kills germs is a poison, and it cannot be taken in-ternally. Every physician knows that signify the control of t

The title mayor comes from the French and originally signified "one who keeps guard." He was the head steward of a city, administering its affairs in the name of the king. Imperator was originally a title of honor bestowed on a victorious general.

After the downfall of the Roman republic it became the title of the su-preme ruler and had the sense of our word emperor. The royal title beg has now almost disappeared and when used in the altered form of bey is applied to a mili tary rank in the Turkish army. Orig-

Mistaken Identity. Sir Thomas Robinson was a tall, un-couth man, and his appearance was rendered still more striking by his hunting dress, which consisted of a tight green jacket, buckskin breeche and a postilion's cap. He once set off in his hunting suit to pay a visit to his sister in Paris. He arrived at the house while there was a large company at dinner. The servant announced M. Robinson, and in walked this remarkable figure, to the amazement of the guests. One of them, a French abbe, lifted his fork three times to his mouth and each time laid it down without tasting the food. Unable at last to restrain his curiosity longer, he burst out eagerly, "Excuse me, monsieur, are you the famous Robinson Crusoe so remarkable in history?"
