

A STORY FOR MOTHERS

Which May Save the Lives of Their Daughters.

A Young Lady at Merrickville Saved When Near Death's Door—Her Illness Brought About by Ailments Peculiar to Her Sex—Only One Way in Which They can be Successfully Resisted.

From the Ottawa Citizen. Perhaps there is no healthier people on the continent of America to-day than the residents of the picturesque village of Merrickville, situated on the Rideau river, and the reason is not so much in its salubrious climate as in the wise precautions taken by its inhabitants in warding off disease by a timely use of proper medicine. The greatest favorite is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and many are the testimonials in regard to their virtues.

Your correspondent on Monday last called at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. H. Easton, and interviewed their daughter, Miss Hattie Easton, a handsome young lady of 20 years, who is known to have been very low and has been restored to health by the use of Pink Pills. "Yes," she said, "I suffered a great deal, but I am so thankful that I am once more restored to health. You have no idea what it is to be so near the portals and feel that everything in life's future is about to slip from your grasp and an early grave your doom. I was taken ill four years ago with troubles peculiar to my sex, and which has hurried many a young woman to her doom—an early grave. I have taken in all about twenty boxes of Pink Pills, and I am only too glad to let the world know what these wonderful little pellets have done for me, hoping that some other unfortunate young woman may be benefited as I was. When sixteen years of age I began to grow pale and weak, and many thought I was going into decline. I became gradually decreased and at times would become unconscious. My strength gradually decreased and I became so emaciated that I was simply a living skeleton. My blood seemed to turn to water and my face was the color of a corpse. I had tried different kinds of medicines, but they did me no good. I was at last confined to my room for several months and hopes of my recovery were given up. At last a friend strongly urged the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and after using a few boxes I began to grow slightly stronger, I continued their use until I had used about twelve boxes, when I found myself restored to health. I now quit using the pills and for six months I never felt better in my life. Then I began to feel that I was not as regular as I should be and to feel the old tired feeling once more coming on. Once more I resorted to Pink Pills, and by the time I had used six boxes I found my health fully restored. I keep a box by me and occasionally when I feel any symptoms of a return of the old trouble, I take a few and I am all right again. I cannot find words of sufficient weight to express my appreciation of the wonderful curative qualities of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and sincerely hope that all who are afflicted as I was will give them a trial and I am certain they will find renewed health.

The facts above related are important, to parents as there are many young girls just budding into womanhood whose condition is, to say the least, more critical than their parents imagine. Their complexion is pale and waxy in appearance, troubled with heart palpitations, headache, shortness of breath, and the slightest exercise, faintness and other distressing symptoms which invariably lead to a premature grave unless prompt steps are taken to bring about a natural condition of health. In this emergency no remedy yet discovered can supply the place of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which build new blood, strengthen the nerves and restore the glow of health to pale and sallow cheeks. They are a sure and certain cure for all troubles peculiar to the female system, young or old.

A Mother's Devotion.

All the way through a man's life, he is consumed like a beautiful fabric in unholly passion, or held aloft like St. George's banner, undefiled in the battle of life, his mother stands by him to the last. If he is successful, she is proud; if he is often cast down, she is pitiful; if he is wicked, she excuses him; if he is young, her hopes are buried in his grave, and she never ceases to dream of what her darling might have been. Others may love him well, but their love never discounts hers. Others may be proud of him, but she always sits in the front row with those who applaud, and catches the splendor of his achievements before it is more to other eyes than a light reflected from afar, or the noise of wings that tarry in their coming. She anticipates his triumphs and antedates his victories. There is an "I told you so" in her proud eyes long before men hand in the verdict of his greatness, and all his achievements are but the prophecies of her loving dreams.

And when she dies, when the fluttering breath has expended itself in the last kiss, when the soft old hands have loosened of their clasps, never before removed since his helpless baby days, when the patient, yearning eyes have withdrawn their gaze to look their first on G.A. what loss can overtake a man's life like this? The dove that brooded above the household nest, and kept every morsel in the shadow of her wings, has winged her flight to Heaven. The everlasting love, that no unfaith, nor sin, nor ingratitude could chill or destroy, has vanished like the sun from out the sky, leaving only a few faint stars and a wan and chilly moon to fill its place. —Chicago Journal.

Wine Drinking in France. It is not unusual for the advocates of moderate drinking—those who believe in the "proper use" of a diluted spirit to point to wine drinking countries of Europe in support of their theories regarding the beneficial properties of "light wines." We would call the attention of these to the fact that inebriety is rapidly increasing in France, and that it is the doctors who are sounding the alarm, and insisting upon legislative action regarding the liquor traffic. They declare that a "race of alcoholics" is rapidly growing up in that country, and that the liquor problem is no longer a question to be trifled with, for if permitted to continue unchecked, the degeneracy of the people through an alcoholic heredity will result in the depopulation of France. These facts are of interest to Canadian readers with reference to the recent ratification of the French Treaty, by our legislation at Ottawa. It was said at that time that this measure would be conducive to temperance. The following extract is from a new book recently published in France by a Frenchman named Charles Wagner:

"The great dark cloud on the horizon is alcoholism. Doubtless its influence is felt in all classes of society, but it is above all the scourge of the people. It is a scourge of recent date—one that has appeared in the last thirty or forty years. Alcoholism is the very latest poison and a cosmopolitan. It can be assigned to native land. Since, through heredity, it has entered the blood and marrow of the people, and is spread alike in country and city, it has alarmed first physicians and lawyers, and little by little all thinkers. The race is stricken in a vital spot. Hospitals, insane asylums and prisons give daily evidence of its progress. In some countries it is easier to count those who are not than those who are addicted to it. Add to this, that what is now drunk is radically different from what was drunk in old times. It is not in the domain of ideas only that our age has discovered fraud. Its material as well as its intellectual and moral sustenance is poison. Its favorite drink is a cheap mixture, adulterated with spirits made of beet root and potatoes, with which the great manufacturers inundate the world. It can be said with truth that it drinks its death and that of its children. The future is poisoned, and coming generations are doomed to blight, insanity and crime. The consequences of alcoholism—economic, hygienic, moral, political and social—can never be calculated. Of nine-tenths of the ruin, disease, accidents, crime, fanaticism, and popular disturbances, we can truly exclaim: The cause is alcohol."

Alcoholism ravages the youth of the people to a frightful extent. There is hardly a form of amusement without it. It disturbs and destroys healthful pleasure. It prevents physical culture; it neutralizes the effects of social meetings where good fellowship and relaxation are sought. Every meeting, every excursion, no matter what its object, runs a risk of ending in a drinking bout. Menaces become coarse, and talk and songs brutal.

Formerly the city relied on the influx of new blood from the fields and mountains to recruit its strength. These reserves are themselves affected. There are in the valleys, where springs flow over, where the air is pure, and where the memory of man cannot recall an epidemic. But alcohol reigns. The number of feeble babies is constantly on the increase. There is a demoralization in habits, in the pocket, in the household. The fruit of a life of labor disappears in smoke. Alcohol is more terrible than the plague, than war, or any scourge of God! Outward losses may be made good; but how shall we remedy an evil which devours blood, brains and nerves, and destroys even the basis of life?

Sometimes, in reviewing our civilization, the question is asked, What can man do? It cannot go down before an invasion of barbarians like that of antiquity. Its enemies, nevertheless, are not far to seek. They do not swarm on a distant horizon, like the Huns and Vandals; they are in its midst, and alcohol is one of the most terrible.

What hope can there be for the future in a youth given over to alcohol? A democracy rests on the good sense of its people; on the wisdom and energy of its citizens; on the spirit of order, of work, of economy. For all these good things one can tremble as long as alcoholic and brainy pain ground. They are the harbinger in our midst.

Faith, said the sergeant, you'd get six months. And if I only thought 'I-oh, you'd get nothing. Well, returned Brady, by jabsbers, I think it."

A boy's fishing pole was fastened to the root of a tree on the river bank, and he was sitting in the sun playing with his dog, idling the time away, as he had been fishing all day and caught nothing. "Fishing?" inquired a man passing. "Yes," answered the boy. "Nice dog you have there; what is his name?" "Fish."

"Fish? That's a queer name for a dog. What do you call him that for?" "Gans he won't bite."

Then the man proceeded on his way.
