RESCUE DROWNING.

How to Approach a Struggling Person—Breaking Strangle Holds.

The annual advice to those who go near the water either with or without knowing how to swim is now in order. Some expert information on how to deal with the drowning is afforded by "Recreation," which cautions would-be saviors against attempting to rescue fully dressed.

"It takes him an instant to remove your outer clothing and shoes," says the writer, "and this will be more than made up by your being able to swim faster in getting to him and freer in carrying him ashore. Proceed immediately to undress, and while so doing think fast.

"Of course my advice to be deliberate is not intended to mean that you should lose any time. I have known men to wait after the person in danger had disappeared from sight, under the impression that a drowning person comes to the surface three times. That tradition is senseless, and has been responsible for many fatalities.

"A drowning man may rise a dozen times or go under once and never be seen again; there is no telling. Make up your mind, therefore, that when a head sinks the situation is critical and not a second should be lost. If the body is visible under the water there is no difficulty in securing it, but if the water is muddy, more especially if a tide or a current is running, use judgment, for you will need all your faculties to be successful.

"Take your first dive from a point above where the body has last been seen, or bubbles have indicated its location, and work down stream. Thus you will not tire bucking the current, nor will you miss the body if it has caught some submerged obstacle; while if it is free you will soon overtake it by swimming.

"On reaching it if under water try to seize the clothing at the back of the neck; in the absence of these lift by the armpits, the chin or the hair. If the bottom is rocky or sandy and you are near it, take a good push off, but if the water is too deep or the bottom soft and muddy swim to the surface, using legs and free arm.

"Now before describing how to carry a victim ashore it will be well to touch on the most dangerous phase of life saving, the rescue of persons made frantic by fear.

"Water polo players have recently developed a system of breaks and holds that has been adopted by scientific life savers, and has been of invaluable assistance to them. Its most simple features are within reach of any one, and will enable you to handle even the worst cases with comparative safety.

"In approaching a struggling person do so warily, and if possible from the back. If he shows any intention of grabbing wildly keep him off with your foot until you can seize one of his wrists. In doing this use the right hand for the right wrist and the left for the left.

"On securing a hold swing him quickly around and throw your free arm around his neck. This places him in your power, and no matter how he struggles you will be able to carry him in safety.

"Another good way, advocated by water polo players is to approach the man boldly, and as soon as he jerks his arm to clutch you to plant your open hand squarely under his armpit, allow yourself to sink, turning your body outwardly, and then shoving him over you come to the surface. If this is done correctly you will find yourself behind him, looking at the back of his head, when it will be an easy matter to place on him any hold you want.

"Professional life savers often recommend splashing water in the face of a struggling person on the ground that it makes him turn from you. My experience has been that in a case of life and death it is as generally fatal; for back in muddy water is better than struggling in the water.

"Leg holds are the great fear of life savers. Let a powerful man encircle you with his legs and you are a goner. If to be caught either by legs or arms from the rear is almost impossible to break. Against any of these two dangers you should guard carefully.

"There are several ways of carrying the victim of a drowning accident ashore. If he is only exhausted let him place both hands on your shoulders and then swim either the breast or back stroke.

"If he is unconscious turn him on his back and your hands on his chest, or seize him under the chin, or hold him by the clothes at the back of the neck, or by the hair. A struggling person is made helpless by the first hold mentioned.

"Upon reaching terra firma the first object should be to expel from the lungs of the victim any water that may have been taken in. Do not stand him on his head, as do so many well meaning but ignorant people.

"Begin by loosening or removing clothing from the waist, chest and neck, then if there is anything round to be had—like a barrel or a log—place him face down on it and roll it gently back and forth so that it will press on the abdomen and stomach and force the water out. If nothing round is at hand make a small bundle of clothes or use a chair or stool and press the water out with your hands.

"When the lungs are free it is necessary to apply artificial respiration until they have been restored to natural breathing. First, care should be taken to clean mouth and throat thoroughly with a handkerchief, towel or cloth. Next seize the tongue and either tie it just beyond the lips or hold it there, that it will not be drawn in with the intake of air and obstruct the passage.

"In many cases the application of smelling salts or pungent herbs to the patient's nostrils or the tickling of his throat with a feather will at this stage be sufficient to start respiration. If not you should use either the universally taught Sylvester method or tongue traction."

THE ARMY.

Local Salvationists Held a Celebration Last Night.

Last night the Salvation Army held a nationality meeting, which was a reproduction of the celebration held on April 12 last, in honor of General Booth's birthday. The many members assembled at the Citadel at 8 o'clock, and after dressing themselves in the costumes of 23 different nations, marched to James and James to the Gore, where they held an open air meeting, after which they returned to the hall, following the same route.

Upon their return, the representatives of the various nations marched to the platform, displaying the dress, manner and custom of the races, and a programme of singing and selections from the band was rendered.

The celebration was held by request of citizens and members of the organization. An admittance fee of ten cents made it easy to get the nations to take part. The music was good, but long ago seven musical instruments were sent away to be replated so that the band might have a complete set of silvermounted instruments.

ROBBINS—MUXWORTHY.

A happy event took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Muxworthy, Peter street, Sandwich, on the evening of July 1, when Mary Annie, third sister of Mr. Muxworthy, became the bride of Alliston E. Robbins, of Hamilton, Ont. The ceremony was performed by Rev. S. W. Muxworthy, of Glencoe, uncle of the bride, in the presence of about thirty-five immediate friends and relatives of the contracting parties. Mendelssohn's Wedding March was played by Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Hixon, of Walkerville. Miss Lena Muxworthy, of Bennington, Ont., acted as bridesmaid, while the groom was supported by Alex. Davidson, of Hamilton. Little Stanley and John Muxworthy, nephews of the bride, acted as ringbearers. After all had partaken of a dainty lunch Mr. and Mrs. Robbins left to spend their honeymoon at the summer home of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Mallender, at Randolph, Mich., after which they will visit briefly among friends before returning to their home in Hamilton.

Good Short Stories

Paul Morton, at a banquet of insurance men, said of a rival company, says the Washington Star:

"They have our sympathy in their bad luck, but they took our sympathy in ill part. It was like the widow who called upon us the other day.

"This widow called to collect a small policy due on her husband's death. Our clerk, as he counted out the money, said sympathetically:

"'I am sorry to hear of your sad misfortune, ma'am.'

"'Well, that's just like you men!' snapped the widow. 'You're all the same—always sorry when a poor woman gets a chance at a little money.'"—Boston Herald.

ANNOYING INTERRUPTION.

The lecturer warmed up.
"Let us follow civilization's torch," he cried. Before he could say more a little man in the back part of the hall suddenly bobbed in view.
"What is civilization's torch?" he shrilly demanded.
The lecturer was annoyed.
"Why, it's a-a-a—it's an expression."
"It ain't got nuthin' to do with Standard Ile, has it?"
"No," the lecturer shouted back.
"Then you can go ahead with your lecture," said the little man as he disappeared from view.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

GOOD ROADS NEEDED.

Of all the yarns that ever come down the line regarding deep mud, says Lippincott's, the following should be entitled to the blue ribbon. It happened in the place where mud originated.

A man was walking along the roadside one summer day and noticed a fairly good looking hat out in the road. Reaching out with his cane he gave it a cut and was startled to hear a voice exclaim:

"Here, what the deuce are you doing?"
"Great Heavens!" exclaimed the man who had hit the hat. "Is that mud as deep as that?"
"Deep!" cried the victim. "Why, man alive, I'm standing on a load of hay!"

The young minister temporarily officiating at Hankins' Falls for the summer met Ehud Leffingwell as he was walking to church on Sunday morning.
"How do, Mr. Leffingwell!" he cried, cheerfully. "Going to church this beautiful morning?"
"Hay," asked Ehud, who was pretty hard of hearing. "Hay?"
"Are you coming to church?" roared the minister.
"Nuh!" Ehud responded. "Lookin' for my cows. She must 'a' got out the barn las' night. I hooked the hasp, I callate, an' jest strayed—"
"Come on to church," the minister shouted cordially, "and after preaching I'll tell the congregation, and they'll help you. You'll get your cow much quicker."
"B'jocks! I'll go ye," said Ehud, heartily, and he fell into step with the young minister. At the church door he was overcome by modesty and, declaring that he didn't have his Sunday go-to-meetin' clothes on, insisted upon sitting in one of the most distant pews.
He didn't hear the sermon at all, but he could tell when it was over by seeing the young minister fold up his manuscript and put it away. This done, the young man began to make announcements. Ehud raised his right hand in a great leathery scoop behind his ear, but still he heard nothing.
"My dear friends," said the minister, "it affords me great pleasure to tell you that on Tuesday evening next, at the hour of six o'clock, there will be celebrated at the home of the bride's parents the wedding of Mr. Edward Stourenboro, one of our most esteemed and promising young men, and that charming, estimable young lady as beautiful as she is good—Miss Mehitabel Dodsworth."
As the minister ceased everybody was astonished to see Ehud Leffingwell arise in his pew.
"An' ye might add, parson," he shouted, "that her eyes isn't mates an' she's a leetle mite lame in the off hind leg."—Harper's Weekly.
