A NIGHT-WATCH WITH A DEAD INFANT. Moorest thou thy bark so soon, little voyager ! Through those infant eyes, with a prophet's vision, sawest thou life's great battle-field, swarming with flerce combatants ! Fell upon thy tindle as: the flar-off din of its angry strife'! Drooped thy band wearly on the bosom of the sinfless, fear-ful of earth-taint ! Fluttered thy wings impatiently against the bars of thy prison-house, sweet bird of Paradise ! God speed thy flight ! No unerring sportaman shall have powr to ruffle thy spread pinions, or main thy searing wing. No sheltering nest had earth for thee, where the single have the bars of sorrow might not blow ! No garden of Eden, where the serpent lay not colled beneath the flowers ! No " Tree of Life," whose branches might have sheltered thee for aye ! Warm fall the sunlight on thy grassy pillow, sweet human blossom ! Softly fall the night dews on the blae-syed violet above thee ! Side by side with thee are hearts that have long since caused hoping or aching. There lies the betrothed maiden, in her unappropriate loveliness ; the bride, with her head pilowed on golden tresses, whose rare basty even the Great Spoller seemed loth to touch ; chil-hood, but yesterday warm and rosy on its mother's breast; the loring wife and mother, in life's sweet prime ; the grey-haired pastor, gone to his reward ; the youth of crisped loefs and trow unfurrowed by care : the heart-broken widow, and tearful orphan all awaiting with folded hands, closed eyes, and eilent lips, alike with thee, the resurrection morn. "Navan Loos A Girr Honss is rus Mours." - The origin of this saying is said to be as follows..." Two who had lived upon, very friendly terms, mutually ar great that whichever died first should leave to the other a valuable consideration, not specifying however, what it was to be. The one was called Martin Timson and the other David Dean. David Dean was called when it was to be. The one was called Martin Timson and the other David Dean. David Dean was called when it was to be. The one was called Martin Timson and the other David Dean. David Dean was called when it was communicated to the latter, he manifested a great deal of disspointment, and observed that " he is great deal of disspointment, and observed that " he of strenget something better than an old horse." " "Not when it was agreed to go to the stable and examine it and it was agreed to go to the stable and examine it during its mouth to look at its teed, and, in the act of opening its mouth to look at its teed, the horse made a moure ensued, and, strange to say, Martin followed David to the grave." Hence canne the anying. " Never look a gift horse in the mouth."
