Some love to sail. With a pleasant gale, O'er the deep and the pathless sea, But a cheerful band, On the safer land, In the railroad car, for me.

Oh, who would float, In a crowded boat. Where the fierce magnitoes bite!
Let me opward dish,
Leke the lighten ng's flash,
In the car, for 'tis my delight.

The four horse stage It behind the age,
The steamer's specule slow:
Scarce a bird can hope
With our speed to cope
As we merrily onward go.

The darling wing Of the proud bird-king, In the sunward flight will tire; But there's naught can tame The snewy frame Of the horse whose rood is fire.

Away we sweep, the police are now trying to put their While the forest deep Gives back our whistle's cry: Like an eagle's scream, Is the hissing steam, As the fields and town flit by.
