What Has Transpired at the United States Capital.

Arbitrary Acts of District Commissioners - The President to Remain in Washington until October - Other Matters.

From our Special Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 15th, 1887.

The new police regulations and city ordinances derived and put in force by the District Commissioners, are in full swing in Washington and the result is that the city is more like Goldsmith's deserted village than ever. Summer time in Washington is loneliness personified, but this summer takes the lead for being the dullest known for many a year. The early adjournment of Congress in March brought about the early departure from the city of the occupants of the fine houses on the handsome avenues, who, after all, are only sojourners here, their interests, and connections belonging in almost every case to some other community. Now the commissioners with their new laws made by themselves, have reduced the town to the appearance of the enchanted woods that led to the palace of the sleeping beauty. But there is no sleeping beauty in this case, unless it be the President at Oak View, who still remains there taking things very quietly. The streets of a city are its characteristic, and its signs of activity, but none are heard in Washington. The bells are off all the horses and the street vendors of fruit and vegetables are forbidden to cry their wares and anxious housekeepers have to hang out the window on the lookout for the ice cart whose afternoon visit, eagerly looked for during the warm spell of last month, was heralded heretofore by the tinkling of the bells on the horses. The commissioners could help the business interests of the place vastly more if they would exercise their surplus energies and misdirected zeal, in trying to devise some means of making the Capital city as attractive in summer as it is in winter, instead of forcing a set of arbitrary rules, which they arrogantly call laws, upon an already much-enduring community. What we need here is some sort of amusement and diversion in the summer time. Clean streets and beautiful parks are not sufficiently inviting to induce strangers to come and tarry with us. We must have people on the streets and in the parks. Instead of that the commissioners are driving away from the town by new ordinances, the large class of people who constitute the majority in all great cities. I refer to small dealers, who find it impossible to make a living in Washington on account of the heavy tax upon them before they can pay their taxes, and the restrictions they meet with in trying to carry on their business. Take it all in all, the capital of the greatest Democracy on the earth has the most autocratic government in the world, and all because Congress does not want to be bothered with the affairs of the District of Columbia, there being no citizen of the District entitled to a vote, gives into the hands of these men power over 200,000 people that the President of the United States does not possess. There is but one hope for downtrodden citizens of Washington. The commissioners have got plenty of rope, and they may hang themselves, and by their abuse of authority bring about a change of or an improvement in the present form of government. The President will not leave Washington until October it is authoritatively stated by his private secretary, Col. Lamont. The reports that he was to go on a fishing excursion with Senator Kenna, and afterwards to fetch Mrs. Cleveland home from Massachusetts, are incorrect. The President has had, as his guests at Oak View, recently, Wm. L. Scott, member of Congress, from Erie, Pa., and ex-Senator Allen G. Thurman of Ohio. Mr. Scott, it may be remembered, was at the time of Mr. Manning's retirement from the Cabinet, spoken of as the probable Secretary of the Treasury. It is said that Mr. Scott declined the position. Ex-Senator Thurman has been in Washington to argue an important railroad case. He is in the best of health and spirits and seems as vigorous as ever. As soon as the contracts for the building of the new naval vessels are out, Secretary Whitney will start for Bar Harbor. If the United States Naval fleet commanded by Admiral Luce is still at Bar Harbor on the arrival of the Secretary, it is probable that the visitors at that resort will be treated to some interesting naval exercises and a review. Secretary Bayard has returned from his trip to the seashore and was at his desk in the State Department last week. Last autumn, the President, moved perhaps by the advice of physicians and friends decided that he needed exercise, and concluded that the south garden of the White House was a suitable place to take it in. Accordingly the gates of the southern grounds were kept locked from four o'clock in the afternoon to nine in the morning. And the President accompanied by Mrs. Cleveland was seen to pace solemnly up and down the walks like a political prisoner or a dethroned king. The plan evidently did not work very well, for after trying it for three mornings only, the President gave up his pedestrian efforts. But the gates have remained locked. Why, nobody knows. The south garden has always been a thoroughfare and if the President don't want to walk there himself, he may as well let those that do.

It appears that the British army authorities cannot afford to buy Canadian horses because they are too dear. The animals are all right, but by the time they are bought and taken to England, the price comes too high. This decision out of an expected first-class avenue of sale, and will very materially strengthen the argument of those advocating unrestricted reciprocity between Canada and the United States.

The Kincaid fishermen report enormous catches for this season of the year. Nothing like it has been known in the history of fishing off that port.

Two clergymen, well known in the diocese of Niagara, are devoting a portion of their vacation time to laying a flag in a little English church in Muskoka.

A serious malady is afflicting many in Raleigh it begins with diarrhoea and inflammation, and many cases have proved fatal. It broke out in the same region last year and caused a number of deaths. It is supposed to be due to bad water. There is a good deal of summer sickness in Chatham.

It is said that Hess Bros., of Listowel, have secured an order from the Canadian Pacific Railway Company to furnish the immense summer hotel which the company is building at Banff Springs in the Rocky Mountains. The order covers the furniture for the entire building, amounts to $6,500, and will probably reach $8,000.

A young man named Wm. McNorgan, of London, was probably fatally injured last week by being thrown from a buggy. In company with two others he was driving at a furious rate through the streets, and when turning sharply round a corner ran against a tree. All three were thrown out, but only McNorgan was badly injured. He was conveyed in the ambulance to the hospital, where he lies in an unconscious and critical state. The trio were drunk. The lively rig was smashed to atoms.
