Two Sets of Children.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

Is it possible to treat children with a grown-up consideration, to try to get their viewpoint, to respect their individuality, and still not make them bumptious and overbearing? I once had very decided notions on that subject. I am not quite so sure now.

I am thinking of sets of children.

are the best behaved I ever never intrude, absolutely obedient full of life and individuality, ectly normal, wholesome, happy and girls.

Like That of a Trained Dog.

I have seen something of their parents' methods with these children.

They demand not only obedience but instant obedience that is almost that of a trained dog. When they are as errand of any sort done they say "please" or "thank you" to children. They do not "tolerate" them. They often give emphatic and apparently unnecessary negatives to the youngsters have set their hearts upon.

all of which is entirely contrary to theories.

The other set of children are treated with courtesy by their father.

He never interrupts them, never interrupts them, never gives them his "please" and "thank you" and does not to interfere with their business. Nevertheless he does make them mind. That is exactly my

of the way a child should be

and, and yet his children though ing and amusing, are very fresh and unobtrusive children.

What Would Have Happened?

It is merely a matter of the child's management? If the two sets of children had been swapped about and the two kinds of discipline still had the same results?

I am inclined to write praising the general way because that is the way to be and because I like to hear

and unobtrusive children.

but not the way to speak to one's own children.)

Not Honest.

And then I thought of the result and I knew it was not honest to praise the theory without telling the whole story. So instead I am passing it along to you. Tell me from your experience pater and mater. Am I must one be stern and imperious with children to keep them within bounds? Or can it be done in a more friendly, courteous way?

There is the danger of straining the nerves and then the disaster of the broken or varicose vein, always the result of to severe a strain on the muscles of the calf and thigh. To go for extremely long walks when a number of hours have been spent in going about the house, is about as foolish as a thing as a woman who wishes to preserve her beauty can be guilty of.

While this may seem not to be a needed bit of advice, as I am telling what should be the food to make a woman healthy, and therefore beautiful, it is in reality a very good point, because the woman who overtaxes her strength by too violent exercise is very apt to overload her stomach and be made ill thereby.

If a woman must rise very early and prepare breakfast she should take a little coffee as soon as it is ready.

Then she should eat leisurely, no matter how many or how urgent her duties.

If she eats a fairly hearty breakfast, the middle meal should be light, as it is then the extra pounds of flesh are likely to accumulate. If she takes a hearty lunch the dinner should be light. The gist being that three hearty meals a day are for the woman who does a hard day's work with her hands.

THE DEAD RETURN.

Hear us, oh, glorious dead!

Come from the valleys of pain!

Rise from the fields of the slain!

Come, share in the feast 'that we spread.

For you died not in vain.

The doubt of your last hours is past.

The tyrant is vanquished at last!

We have broken and shattered his line.

We have silenced each cannon and mine.

And now the war's thundering dies.

Our anthems of victory rise.

Join us, oh, glorious dead!

In all our exulting to-day!

Come share in our laughter and play.

'Twas for this that you suffered and bled.

'Twas for this that you gave life away.

By your lance and your sword as you fell.

In those mad days of shrapnel and shell.

We pledged to be true to the end.

We swore that your cause we'd defend.

Now come from your fields of the slain

Send us our glorious dead

Oh, God, for an hour, for a day!

Let them come that were taken away.

The Yellow Peril

Thinking that possibly the Chinese residing in the city might know something about the recent rumors to the effect that many Chinamen were to be imported here to be used as cheap labor, the Telegram reporter conducted some investigations Tuesday night, and in the course of these, elicited a very interesting and strange story. The proprietor of a laundry on one of the back streets, declared that he had certain knowledge that "the plan was formulated before the 500-000 Chinamen left their homes to labor in France for the duration of the war."—namely, that when the war ended, they were to be distributed around the British Dominions and Colonies to be used as cheap labor in those countries. When the laborers were required for France, secret agents of the British War Office were posted throughout China, for the purpose of spreading this news, and every Chinaman that left that country to labor in France, did so knowing that when the war was concluded, they were to be posted in the Dominions, and take no head tax or other dues were to be levied on them. German agents and spies were also at work in China, endeavoring to persuade the Chinese not to go to France, but rather to leave for Germany, and to become pro-German in sentiment and action.

In fact, a great many did go to Germany, and no less than six ships, taking Chinamen to France, were sunk by bombs placed in them before sailing.

Our informant receives Chinese papers regularly, and so is well posted up in the news of his native country. Also, a couple of his countrymen who arrived here not long ago, gave him the latest facts. From one of these we gleaned interesting information which we withhold until the signing of peace.

According to these Chinamen, the number to come to this country is ten thousand, and the first batch will arrive next Spring. The work they will engage in is general labor, while many of them are skilled tradesmen who can take responsible jobs. It was also declared that several thousand are to participate in the fishery, merchants here to supply them. They will work for very little remuneration, with the consequence that the local fishermen will be out-competed and eventually ruined. Our informant stated that but a few of them would engage in

A Hold Up.

As Mr. John Barnes was on his way home Tuesday night, he was confronted by a man of foreign appearance who pointed a revolver at him, and said, "Me wanta kale. Hand out quick!" The tone was at once so menacing and commanding that Mr.

Barnes was quick to comply with the command and handed out a mule-force blow that nearly knocked the gunman into the middle of next week. He was at a loss as to what he would do with him next, but was saved the trouble of deciding, as the foreigner
