Invented German Cannon to Slaughter Civilians.

It is said that Prof. Rausenberger would like to down the sudden fame that came to him on Good Friday in the spring of 1918 when the Germans began to bombard Paris with a gun that would send a projectile seventy-five miles. On that holy day, the Germans began a campaign that was intended to terrorize the French capital. It followed close upon the first great drive of that year which had smashed the Fifth British Army. The high command considered that this was the psychological moment to disclose to the world the fact that they possessed a gun with which it was possible to bombard cities over seventy miles distant. Paris was greatly alarmed by the spring offensive, so Parisians would be given something more to worry about. The first thing that this gun accomplished was the wrecking of a church, in which a number of Good Friday worshippers were killed. The bombardment of Paris by this great gun continued at intervals as long as the Germans were in a position to do so. It was announced that the man who invented the gun was Prof. Rausenberger, who was in charge of the heavy gun section of the Krupp Works. The Germans boasted about Rausenberger's accomplishment, but the allied experts declared that it was nothing to be very proud of. The fact that it was more or less indefinite in its aim made the gun useless so far as battles were concerned. It could only be used for the purpose of killing and terrorizing the civilian population. In fact, the 75-mile gun has never been used in any military operation. On that account Prof. Rausenberger has been named as one of the men who ought to figure in the list of German War Criminals. It is claimed by those who mention his name that he should be made to prove that the gun was intended to figure in plans of battle and that it actually did so. Otherwise it may be concluded that Prof. Rausenberger deliberately devised a new scheme for the wholesale murder of civilians. And now word comes from Germany that Prof. Rausenberger and his friends would like to have it understood that he was by no means entirely responsible for the invention of the gun. Such modesty is becoming and also suggests that Rausenberger is not altogether unacquainted with the phrase "Safety First."

The Dog Waiter.

A man and wife moved to New York from the west—a sane, conservative man and wife, used to money and knowing the worth of it—and brought a family dog along, paying $5 extra fare for the dog, by the way, on the train. They went to a large and orgulous hotel and in the due course of time the dog needed sustenance. "Ring for a waiter," said the husband, "and we'll get the dog some scraps." The floor waiter came and when asked to bring some food for the dog explained with some hauteur that he was the floor waiter and not the dog waiter, but would inform the dog waiter of the desires of the dog. The dog waiter arrived in course of time and the predicament of the dog was explained to him. The dog waiter wrote down the order carefully and departed. Presently he returned bearing a silver tray on which were displayed daintily various articles of food—some vegetables, some meat and a cracker or two. "What's that?" asked the husband, examining the contents of the tray with interest. "The service for the dog, sir," the waiter replied. "How much is it?" "One dollar, sir." The husband took the tray. "Get the dog a bone," he said. "I'll eat this. It's the best looking meal I have seen in the place, and the cheapest."

Has to Wait 28 Years to Duplicate First Birthday.

Little Miss Madigan, youngest daughter of William Madigan, of the Western Union Cable Office at North Sydney, had her first birthday Feb. 28. As a matter of fact, it was her original birthday. She was born in it.

What Miss Madigan thinks about arriving in this world on Sunday, the 28th of February, she refused to disclose to the press. Her remarks during the day were confined to non-committal utterances which cannot be used to convict her when she grows up.
So far as is known up to the present, Miss Madigan is the one and only Leap Year baby in this end of the district, at least she is the first to be reported. Her sex was correctly chosen to suit the occasion.
During the whole of her life she will have to face the aggravating fact of only having one birthday every four years. She will no longer have to wait four years between birthday parties, in her younger days, but as she grows older, she will realize with despair that every birthday she passes, makes her not one year, but four years older.

Also, whereas the ordinary person has at least one birthday on a Sunday in every eight years, so that at least once in that period they can snooze in and lay off and celebrate a bit, little Miss Madigan will have to wait 28 years before the church bells ring on her natal day again.
Nevertheless, she was born under the lucky star of womanhood and if there be anything in omens she will probably be the first lady member of parliament from this district.—Sydney Record.
