

COLLEGE GRANTS.

The question of government aid to denominational colleges in this Province has not yet been settled apparently, although if the friends of those institutions would take "No" for an answer, they certainly received it during the last session of the Ontario Legislature. Long before the estimates were brought down the question of continuing the usual grants to these colleges was debated, and though they found a few advocates, some writers contending for them out of filial love for alma mater, it was evident that the majority of the press and people were against them, and that the most prevalent feeling was, that for all the purposes of a higher education the University in Toronto was quite sufficient. The Government were inclined to think so too, for when the supplementary estimates, making the usual allowances to some half dozen sectarian educational institutions, were laid before the House, a very plain intimation was given that this was the last favour of the kind that was to be expected. It was a wise determination, and it is to be hoped that it will be carried out to the utmost; and that those who would seek the deep shades of the groves of Parnassus, and all the other pleasures derivable from a thorough acquaintance with classic lore, and other physical and natural science, will be accorded full liberty to pay all the tolls on the particular roads their whims lead them to travel in order to gain their destination, if they voluntarily forsake that which has been legally laid out, and which the voice of the country approves. But the adversaries of the Provincial University are not so easily put down, nor will they lightly yield an assent to the withdrawal of their accustomed donation. Fallacious arguments are being revived, and writers are reiterating assertions, which they themselves cannot possibly believe, that the institutions in whose favour they are begging are in no manner sectarian—all the advantages they possess being available by parties of every creed. Local feeling has also much to do in stirring up the present efforts to obtain a continuation of the grants to which we have referred. The inhabitants of every place which has a little college consider themselves in duty bound to protect it as sacredly as certain of the ancients guarded the palladium, and regard any interference with its prerogatives, or even a word of disparagement as a crime little short of sacrilege. Why should Toronto have everything its own way; why should the University there be endowed by a grant of public lands and colleges in other places receive nothing? For the very simple reason that the University is capable of affording the highest education to all Provincialists who may seek it, and that the best secular education the Province affords is to be had there. It will require the exercise of a considerable amount of firmness on the part of the Government to enable them to carry out their resolution of stopping the donations. Petitions, cunningly worded, praying for a continuance of the grants, are being laid in dozens before the Legislature. They want liberal and permanent—nothing short of permanent, mind ye—provision in aid of that distributive system of superior education, the claims of which have for a long time been recognized by successive Parliaments. But old things have passed away; the Ontario Legislature is in a position to deal with sectarian questions in a more untrammelled spirit than could the old House of Assembly; they do not require to reciprocate favours on these points; and they may cut off the "provision" without meeting opposition that would count more than a drop in the bucket.

MARRIAGES.

Social Party and Presentation at Knatchbull.

Some years ago there was erected in this neighbourhood, a building to serve for the purposes of holding a Sabbath-School, and as a meeting house when the services of a minister could be obtained. Rev. Mr. Wilkinson has presided in it during the past year, and has also taken a lively interest in the school. As the latter is about to close for the winter the friends held a social party on the 26th ultimo to mark the event. There was the usual amount of good things which were eaten in the usual way, and a collection, which proved to be a generous one, was afterwards taken up, in order that the Library might be replenished. Mr. A. D. Campbell, school teacher, ably presided, and after some recitations had been given, and speeches made, an address was presented to the Rev. Mr. Wilkinson, by the Superintendent, Teachers, and parents of the children, in which they stated, that they would feel they had been remiss in their duty did they not make some public acknowledgment of their gratitude for his valuable services in endeavouring to advance the interests of the school. When they took into consideration the fact that so much of his time was occupied with his pulpit ministrations, they felt doubly indebted for the extra tax upon his energies for their moral and spiritual good. As it was not in their power to render him that reward which they felt he deserved, they hoped he would be pleased to accept the address as a token of the deep gratitude which they felt for his Christian efforts on their behalf, and for his services as pastor. They also tendered their thanks to his partner in life for the sweet intercourse they had with her, and for the benefit of her Christian example. The address concluded with an invocation of the Divine blessing on the Rev. gentleman and all his family.

A reply in suitable terms having been made, the company continued to enjoy themselves for some time, and then retired to their homes reflecting on an evening well spent.

The potato crop in the neighborhood of Salem, we are informed, is not more than one half what it usually is; indeed, some farmers are not digging their potatoes at all, as they would not recompense the labour. Turnips are, in general, pretty good.
