Their Second Performance.

Their Second Performance. Their Second Performance.

"The Black Hussar" Opera Company gave their second performance at the Grand last evening to a largeer audience than on the opening night. The opera has taken a firm hold as a favorite and encores were several times demanded last night. The chorus singing is especially fine and the catchy music pleasing. The company is deserving of a packed house on their farewall performance this evening.

Arthur Lloyd in "Our Party." "Our Party," which opens at the Grand co-morrow night for two nights and matito-morrow night for two nights and matinee, will be presented by a brilliant company, headed by England's vocal comedian, Mr. Arthur Licyd, whose name stands as the composer of more "topical hits" than any other artist in his line. "Our Party" is the very junny comedy which has taken the leading European cities by storm where it has been presented over 1,000 times by this same company. As a musical comedy it is said to rank higher than any seen in years. There are over twenty numbers of musical selections introduced incidental to te comedy, including Mr. Lloyd's original topical songs, medleys, also the famous "Our Party" quartet.

According to Chairman Fitzgerald of No. 3 committee there has been some under-hand dealing in the delivery of cordwood. He told of one man, at the meeting last night, who had bought a cord of wood, and had received only three-fourths of that amount. Notwithstanding this fact, the load was marked "128 feet." The market clerk, in this instance, had evidently not supervised the delivery at all. He thought that all sellers should be compelled to let the market clerk inspect each load, and that the clerk should supply each driver with tickets, to prevent fraud. each driver with tickets, to prevent fraud.

Marie Tavary in Grand Opera.

If all be true that is being said by the critics about Mme. Marie Tavary and her grand opera company, then lovers of good music—opera in particular—may as well make up their minds to have a real treat next Friday at the Grand. Extraordinary things are written both of Travary and her associates. The latter are: M'lle Irene Pevny, prima donna (soprano), Royal Opera, Munich; the Baroness Helen Von Doenholf, prima donna (contralto, Imperial Opera, Berlin; Sofia Romeni (soprano), Milan; Sara Carr (contralto), New York; Payne Clarke (primo tenor), w York; Payne Clarke (primo ter ondon; Charles Bassett, New York, London; Charles Bassett, New York, wm. The Canada Paint Company.

The case of the Canada Paint Company vs. Wm. Johnson & Sons, limited, was decided on Saturday by Mr. Justice Tait at Montreal, who delivered judgment on the merits. It will be remembered that in July last at the instance of the Canada Paint Company, an injunction was issued against Wm. Johnson & Sons, limited, restraining them from doing business under their corporate name, and also from using certain labals and trade marks. Mt. Justice tait, in delivering judgment, gave an extended the second of the s tait, in delivering judgment, gave an ex-haustive review of the case. The outcome is the sustaining and perpetuating of the injunction presently operative with the important exception that the company deendants have the power inside the pseribed limits named above to carry business under their corporate name of Wm. Johnson & Sons, limited. The judg gave damages to the Canada Paint Company for $200 and costs.

The Indian Poet-Reciter. The Indian Poct-Reciter.

A great deal of praise has been bestowed upon Miss E. Pauline Johnson's abilities as an elecutionist. She recites poetical selections of her own composition, and, it is said, is possessed of great histrionic as well as literary ability. Her elecutionary work is forceful, intelligent and full of meaning. Miss Johnson is of Indian descent. Her father, the head chief of the Mohawks, her mother a mother a lady of British blood—Pauline Johnson was born (and still is) under Indian law, on Indian land, Miss Johnson's paternal ancestry is one long line

Howe a member of an eminent literary fami a member of an eminent literary family, endows her daughter with the ability to voice her forest songs in pure and forcible English. Miss Johnson's costumes are simple, unique and striking. Particularly so is the one she wears while reciting those of her poems that touch on native life and character. It is an Indian dress whose every ornament, from the taion necklace to the curiboo mocassins, has a history. It is fashioned after the most authentic pattern of that worn by Minnelaha and is genuine throughout, being made of Indian-tanned doeskin and cariboo, and decorated with furs from the Indian reserves. The exceptional beauty of the ermine (the fur always worn by a chief's daughter) is due to its being procured in Athabasca and presented to Miss Johnson by the Hudson Bay Company. The brooches which decorate this gown sre all of sold silver and of Indian workmanship of great age; those on the bodice being the Johnson family heirlooms worn by Miss Johnson's ancestors before the revolutionary war.
