PHARMACEUTICAL.

We have, on previous occasions, mentioned through the columns of this journal that, until we were prepared to manufacture a more complete line of pharmaceutical preparations in a proper manner, we would confine ourselves to the production of a limited number of specialties. We kept our word, and up to the present time have only offered such goods as we could manufacture well with the facilities we possessed. We have now greater room and greater facilities, and are willing to extend our business along such lines as may suit the needs of our customers and all those whom we would like to make such.

We are trying to increase our business along the lines indicated by the wants of those who deal with us, and we have been fairly successful in pursuing this policy. We feel that we can still grow from without, as well as within.

We have tried carefully and honestly to merit the non-secret business of which we have made a specialty and will as carefully and honestly try to merit the trade in pharmaceutical specialties, which our drug friends may confide to us.
