

Dublin. - No occurrence in Dublin for many years has produced a feeling of indignation so deep and wide spread as the burning of six human beings in Westmoreland street on Thursday evening.

Now, let us see what happened about nine o'clock on Thursday evening. The corner house of Westmoreland street, adjoining Aston quay, and just at Carlisle bridge, has been recently rebuilt, and is occupied by the Ballast Board.

Fervent prayers went up from all present as the flames put the machine to the wall, and the poor creatures above became calm, and seemed to think deliverance certain. But oh! how shall I describe the shriek of utter despair which came from that window when that frail and worthless play-toy which innocent citizens call a fire-escape like a willow, collapsed, and fell to the ground.

The action of the American Government towards the Fenians in the United States gives general satisfaction. The London Times of the 16th of June eulogizes the Washington Government, and says "it would be impossible to exaggerate the good faith, the friendliness, the sincerity, and the regard for mutual obligations which have prompted these energetic and decisive measures."

The feeling against the fire brigade is so strong that they are said to have been booted by the mob while removing their machines. Nearly all the Dublin papers vehemently denounce the Corporation for allowing their officers to let their fire escapes get out of order, and rendering it possible for such a calamity to occur because of their utter inefficiency.

Francis Naegle, the notorious Fenian informer, taking warning from the fate of his worthy colleague, Warner - another of those wretches whom conspirators always hate into active life, and whom Governments are obliged to employ in order to detect and put down nascent treason, or other crimes, has fled from Ireland, and secured security here from the vengeance of the accomplices whom he betrayed.

Naegle's exit has given evidence at the trial by court martial of a non-commissioned officer of a line regiment for complicity in the Fenian conspiracy.

A good Providence appears to have heard the prayers of the people, and to have averted from us the rinderpest, only seven cases of which occurred, and since its first appearance some weeks since.

The change of weather was sadly wanted for the country. The usually low temperature of the last month, and the sharp easterly winds that prevailed retarded vegetation considerably, but already the genial and copious rain, and the increased temperature, have visibly advanced the spring's growth.

It is understood that the gifted and patriotic member for the city of Cork, Mr. John Francis Maguire, will proceed to the United States and Canada, at the close of the session, for a protracted term, up to next spring, with a view to publish a work on the condition of these countries, in which project the talented and patriotic author of 'Home and its Scenery' is generously seconded by an eminent publishing firm in London.

Every crop is flourishing, and no danger was apprehended from an injurious interference with the cattle traffic. A most satisfactory bill of health was shown every where, and there was promise of abundance in 1866, but the principal cause of contentment and rejoicing was that the rinderpest, if it had existed here at all, had been banished throughout the length and breadth of Ireland, and that the cattle of Ireland were free from the plague which had ravaged England and Scotland, and half of the countries of Europe.

In 1789 there were but 35 churches, or oratories in England and Scotland; in 1866, they amount to 1,161. As for the priests, they were 180 in 1789, 939 in 1850; and they number at present 1,569.

A landed estate worth £1,000 melts in Chancery like a flake of snow in a running gutter. No Parliament will ever be as strong as money. Some years ago, to prove the corrupt state of justice under the Bonapartes at Naples, it was stated that a widow having her claims on her husband's estate disputed by his brother, had to pay £50 in legal expenses before she could resume the remaining £100.

The Atlantic cable is finished, and the Great Eastern leaves Sheerness on the 30th (June). With the abandonment of the Conference of the forts of the neutral Powers, naturally comes, to an end; though, if there was to appear any chance of remaining profane negotiations, it would doubtless not be neglected. Every Power is interested in checking a war which may spread over the greater part of the Continent.

Eastern Europe, the prospect is gloomy enough. Not are the warring portions of the Turkish Empire yet so secure, that we can afford to dispense with the supervision and guardianship that the great Powers have exercised.

The REAL ESTATE INTERESTS BILL. - Mr. Locke King's Real Estate Interests Bill, which proposed to introduce into the English law of real property a principle not only utterly unknown at present to it, but opposed to every principle upon which it is founded - represents but one of the many attempts which are from time to time made with a view to obtaining a footing for democratic, not to say socialist principles among the institutions of the country.

From the time when every acre in the kingdom was held by a direct grant from the Sovereign as possessed in the same sense that personal property is, it cannot be removed or carried abroad, but must for ever remain part of the kingdom, and there has ever been assumed a right to treat it from a point of view based on public policy, and not on abstract considerations of justice as between individuals.

The most democratic of writers has said that the land belongs to nobody, its produce to everybody - a principle which of course is inadmissible, but which, if carried out, would have no other result than to hand all the real property of any State into the hands of the governing power, were it only for the due protection, not only of the present 'everybody,' but of the 'everybody' who will succeed in their right to its fruits.

Every crop is flourishing, and no danger was apprehended from an injurious interference with the cattle traffic. A most satisfactory bill of health was shown every where, and there was promise of abundance in 1866, but the principal cause of contentment and rejoicing was that the rinderpest, if it had existed here at all, had been banished throughout the length and breadth of Ireland, and that the cattle of Ireland were free from the plague which had ravaged England and Scotland, and half of the countries of Europe.

Every crop is flourishing, and no danger was apprehended from an injurious interference with the cattle traffic. A most satisfactory bill of health was shown every where, and there was promise of abundance in 1866, but the principal cause of contentment and rejoicing was that the rinderpest, if it had existed here at all, had been banished throughout the length and breadth of Ireland, and that the cattle of Ireland were free from the plague which had ravaged England and Scotland, and half of the countries of Europe.

Every crop is flourishing, and no danger was apprehended from an injurious interference with the cattle traffic. A most satisfactory bill of health was shown every where, and there was promise of abundance in 1866, but the principal cause of contentment and rejoicing was that the rinderpest, if it had existed here at all, had been banished throughout the length and breadth of Ireland, and that the cattle of Ireland were free from the plague which had ravaged England and Scotland, and half of the countries of Europe.

Every crop is flourishing, and no danger was apprehended from an injurious interference with the cattle traffic. A most satisfactory bill of health was shown every where, and there was promise of abundance in 1866, but the principal cause of contentment and rejoicing was that the rinderpest, if it had existed here at all, had been banished throughout the length and breadth of Ireland, and that the cattle of Ireland were free from the plague which had ravaged England and Scotland, and half of the countries of Europe.

Every crop is flourishing, and no danger was apprehended from an injurious interference with the cattle traffic. A most satisfactory bill of health was shown every where, and there was promise of abundance in 1866, but the principal cause of contentment and rejoicing was that the rinderpest, if it had existed here at all, had been banished throughout the length and breadth of Ireland, and that the cattle of Ireland were free from the plague which had ravaged England and Scotland, and half of the countries of Europe.

Every crop is flourishing, and no danger was apprehended from an injurious interference with the cattle traffic. A most satisfactory bill of health was shown every where, and there was promise of abundance in 1866, but the principal cause of contentment and rejoicing was that the rinderpest, if it had existed here at all, had been banished throughout the length and breadth of Ireland, and that the cattle of Ireland were free from the plague which had ravaged England and Scotland, and half of the countries of Europe.

Mr. Whalley is a Jesuit in disguise. The Whalleyism of this anti-Whalley insinuation is very droll, the Protestantism of the honorable member for Peterborough being only a slight caricature of that of the honorable member for North Warwickshire; but really, from Mr. Newdegate's point of view - to wit, that his prejudices, pushed to their logical or illogical extreme, can only be the professions of an artful enemy - Mr. Whalley's Friday performance must appear to give grave corroboration to the charge.

Mr. Whalley's mind is diseased to an extent that will make any constituency that shall in future retain him, without strict orders to hold his tongue on all questions (since in the grass of every one he discovers the latent Roman snake), appear as mad as himself. To touch the 'air was full of poignards,' and to Mr. Whalley the world is full of Papias. - Papias is only popery in an antipodal development. Mr. Whalley has no wish to be an alarmist, but he cannot help stating with horror that the bulk of the Royal Artillery are Roman Catholics, and therefore most probably Fenians.

Mr. Whalley's mind is diseased to an extent that will make any constituency that shall in future retain him, without strict orders to hold his tongue on all questions (since in the grass of every one he discovers the latent Roman snake), appear as mad as himself. To touch the 'air was full of poignards,' and to Mr. Whalley the world is full of Papias. - Papias is only popery in an antipodal development. Mr. Whalley has no wish to be an alarmist, but he cannot help stating with horror that the bulk of the Royal Artillery are Roman Catholics, and therefore most probably Fenians.

Mr. Whalley's mind is diseased to an extent that will make any constituency that shall in future retain him, without strict orders to hold his tongue on all questions (since in the grass of every one he discovers the latent Roman snake), appear as mad as himself. To touch the 'air was full of poignards,' and to Mr. Whalley the world is full of Papias. - Papias is only popery in an antipodal development. Mr. Whalley has no wish to be an alarmist, but he cannot help stating with horror that the bulk of the Royal Artillery are Roman Catholics, and therefore most probably Fenians.

Mr. Whalley's mind is diseased to an extent that will make any constituency that shall in future retain him, without strict orders to hold his tongue on all questions (since in the grass of every one he discovers the latent Roman snake), appear as mad as himself. To touch the 'air was full of poignards,' and to Mr. Whalley the world is full of Papias. - Papias is only popery in an antipodal development. Mr. Whalley has no wish to be an alarmist, but he cannot help stating with horror that the bulk of the Royal Artillery are Roman Catholics, and therefore most probably Fenians.

Mr. Whalley's mind is diseased to an extent that will make any constituency that shall in future retain him, without strict orders to hold his tongue on all questions (since in the grass of every one he discovers the latent Roman snake), appear as mad as himself. To touch the 'air was full of poignards,' and to Mr. Whalley the world is full of Papias. - Papias is only popery in an antipodal development. Mr. Whalley has no wish to be an alarmist, but he cannot help stating with horror that the bulk of the Royal Artillery are Roman Catholics, and therefore most probably Fenians.

Mr. Whalley's mind is diseased to an extent that will make any constituency that shall in future retain him, without strict orders to hold his tongue on all questions (since in the grass of every one he discovers the latent Roman snake), appear as mad as himself. To touch the 'air was full of poignards,' and to Mr. Whalley the world is full of Papias. - Papias is only popery in an antipodal development. Mr. Whalley has no wish to be an alarmist, but he cannot help stating with horror that the bulk of the Royal Artillery are Roman Catholics, and therefore most probably Fenians.

Mr. Whalley's mind is diseased to an extent that will make any constituency that shall in future retain him, without strict orders to hold his tongue on all questions (since in the grass of every one he discovers the latent Roman snake), appear as mad as himself. To touch the 'air was full of poignards,' and to Mr. Whalley the world is full of Papias. - Papias is only popery in an antipodal development. Mr. Whalley has no wish to be an alarmist, but he cannot help stating with horror that the bulk of the Royal Artillery are Roman Catholics, and therefore most probably Fenians.

Mr. Whalley's mind is diseased to an extent that will make any constituency that shall in future retain him, without strict orders to hold his tongue on all questions (since in the grass of every one he discovers the latent Roman snake), appear as mad as himself. To touch the 'air was full of poignards,' and to Mr. Whalley the world is full of Papias. - Papias is only popery in an antipodal development. Mr. Whalley has no wish to be an alarmist, but he cannot help stating with horror that the bulk of the Royal Artillery are Roman Catholics, and therefore most probably Fenians.

Mr. Whalley's mind is diseased to an extent that will make any constituency that shall in future retain him, without strict orders to hold his tongue on all questions (since in the grass of every one he discovers the latent Roman snake), appear as mad as himself. To touch the 'air was full of poignards,' and to Mr. Whalley the world is full of Papias. - Papias is only popery in an antipodal development. Mr. Whalley has no wish to be an alarmist, but he cannot help stating with horror that the bulk of the Royal Artillery are Roman Catholics, and therefore most probably Fenians.

Mr. Roberts' ON FENIANISM AND CANADA. - Mr. Roberts has addressed another large Fenian meeting at New York, and spoke very lovingly of Canada. He declared himself as much a Canadian as a Fenian, and said that now it would be best to 'wash the Canadians' who were very fine fellows, from the throw off their own yoke, when his sympathies, it seems, will prompt him to lend us his able assistance. He is quite right now, and we recommend him to stick to that. When we want him we shall send for him, and in the meantime he can bear in mind the unavailability of professed service. - Herald.

THE CAPTURED FENIANS. - In Congress, on the 25th June, upon a motion being made for inquiry whether the American Government had intercepted in behalf of arrested Fenians, Mr. Banks of the Committee on Foreign Affairs said he believed that some steps had been taken in that direction, and that a bill was now pressed.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE FREEMAN'S JOURNAL. - RICHMOND, June 18 1866. - Dear Sir - I desire to call the attention of the public to the fact, that the Puritanical party now in possession of the two houses of Congress, have, to prevent a restoration of the Southern States to their rights in the Union, passed a bill recently, increasing the United States Navy to a great extent, and have entirely ignored the Southern people. They do not intend, it seems, to permit the Southern people to be represented in Congress, in the Navy, or in any branch of the Federal Government.

THE NEWSPAPERS OF THE WESTERN UNITED STATES, generally give unfavorable reports with regard to crops. The season has been cold and wet and consequently backward; devastating floods and a scarcity of labor have also had their effect, and the winter wheat in the middle and western districts has seriously suffered. Other cereals look more promising. We have nothing so far from the head of the agricultural bureau at Washington upon the subject.

FENIANISM IN CONGRESS. - The Fenian influence seems scarcely less omnipotent in Congress, than in the Commissioner's Court. - Mr. Ancona and Mr. Speaker Colfax visiting with the Hon. Henry Wilson, of Massachusetts, in doing honour to the great President Roberts. The secret of all this hero worship is told by the 'Erie (Pa) Dispatch,' and as the explanation seems a reasonable one, we give it in the words of the 'Dispatch.' - 'Unquestionably the person holding the most power in his single hand to-day in the American Republic, is William R. Roberts, 'Colonel' and 'President' of the Irish Republic in America, Highschooler of the Fenian Brotherhood, and late dry goods dealer in the 'Brooklyn, New York city.' The 'Dispatch,' however, does not seem to have as much regard for this power as Congress feels; and the tone in which he speaks is not complimentary. 'He knows, too, that he holds the votes of two or three hundred Irishmen in his breeches pocket, and he is even now employed in peddling them out to the highest bidder. The Irish vote is too valuable to be scorned, and the bidding for it is getting to be quite spirited. In New York, Philadelphia or Baltimore, a hundred thousand Irishmen are good for two hundred thousand votes, for in the eyes of their masters, one that can't poll two votes at a single election is looked upon as shirking his duty.' - Toronto Globe.

CRIME IN THE STATE OF NEW YORK. - The annual report of the New York Prison Association just published, contains some extraordinary accounts of crime in that State. After showing that through the neglect of the officers of the law, criminals find it easy to escape punishment, and that forfeited bail is seldom collected, so that only 25 per cent. of those who were indicted were tried; 18 per cent. were convicted on trial; 25 per cent. confessed their guilt; 41 per cent. forfeited their recognizances, amounting in the aggregate to $98,800 - not one penny of which was recovered - the report proceeds to give some startling facts. - A survey of the State this year shows that there is a strong and increasing tendency of crime to crystallize, if we may so say, into aggregates and masses. Men, more rarely now than formerly, commit robberies and burglaries alone. They operate extensively in groups. Some gangs are confined to single towns; others extend their operations over a whole county; others, still, embrace several counties; while the tendency is for individual gangs to affiliate with and reciprocally assist and receive assistance from all the others in the State. This tendency to aggregation is apparent in our larger cities as well as in the rural districts. Through the agency of those affiliated societies of thieves, property once stolen is passed rapidly from hand, until it becomes almost impossible to trace it or, if it is discovered, original depredators cannot be ascertained, and therefore go unwhipped of justice. If this tendency to aggregation and organization continues to increase for the future, as it has done for a few years past, we shall soon have organized bands of associated depredators in all the counties of the State, whose members will be known to each other by secret signs, passwords, and other signs, mutually assist each other in disposing of their plunder, in baffling arrest, in escaping from jail, or in procuring bail which will effect their release from custody.

The cholera does not seem to spread very rapidly in New York city. Though the weather has become warm, and everything favours the disease, only two or three new cases are reported per day, and these the Health officers seem to have under control. The impression is gaining ground, among medical men that the disease will not be very prevalent or fatal this year. It has been noted that each appearance in this country the cholera has assumed a milder form and is liable to spread. The cholera this year proves thus far to be more readily managed than ever before. - Rochester Ex.

WASHINGTON, June 25. - The President to-day sent to the House a message, in answer to a resolution calling for information in regard to the arrest and imprisonment in Ireland of American citizens, enclosing a report from the Secretary of State upon the subject. The latter says that he has the honor to submit a list of the names of all alleged citizens of the United States who according to the information in the department, have been arrested since the recent suspension of the habeas corpus act in that country. Pursuant to the instructions of the department, the United States Minister at London, and Consuls of the United States in Ireland, have made such representation to the British authorities as regard to the cases of persons, that they have been released except two who were held for trial on grounds, supposed to be sufficient by the judicial authorities. It is believed, however, that the consequence of the aforesaid representations, even if the persons referred to, one of whom is Colonel Moran, have been set at liberty before the present time, will

UNITED STATES. - The Rev. Edward Fitzgerald, Pastor of St. Patrick's Church, Columbus, Ohio, has been appointed by the Holy Father Bishop of Little Rock Arkansas. We do not know whether we ought to congratulate our revered friend, but we are certain that if the Catholic religion is ever to flourish in Arkansas, he is just the man to make it. - Catholic telegraph.

THE TRIAL OF PRIESTS FOR FENIANISM. - The trial of the five priests of the Vincent College, Cape Girardeau, who were arrested for preaching without subscribing to the new constitution oath, has been further postponed to the December term. We learn that another reverend gentleman has been fined five hundred dollars for celebrating marriage while refusing to subscribe to the same oath, and that he has taken an appeal to the Supreme Court of the State. - St. Louis Guardian.