Kindergarten for Young Northerners

The builders have handed over to young northerners the keys to a new 140-child kindergarten in the Chukchi village of Markovo.

The two-storey building has bright sleeping quarters and play rooms, halls for musical studies and gymnastics, a winter garden, and even a swimming pool. The opening of this building at Markovo has fully solved the problem of placing children in kindergartens, and many housewives can now take part in socially useful work, an outcome all the more beneficial as, in the Far North, each pair of working hands is worth its weight in gold.
