

- J.J. SHEA/Nairobi

To help build a wealthier environmentally safer world, more just and democratic, with less conflict and poverty, to help Canadians benefit from Canada's external affairs, and profit from her international trade activities.

- W. NEELIN/London

The mission of the Department of External Affairs and International Trade is two fold:
firstly; through the diplomatic corps to promote the Canadian governments moral, ethical and political views in an attempt to achieve global harmony;
secondly; through international trade to expand and promote Canadian trade, both public and private, on a world scale.

- D. WRIGHT/PARIS

To promote Canadian interests around the world and to understand and respond to international developments.

- J. AUSMAN/IMU

To promote Canada's interests throughout the world, both directly, by obtaining fair national advantage for Canadian individuals or groups, and indirectly, by making the global village in which we live a better and safer place.

- P. DUNCAN/MIS

That our relations with other countries reflect the values and aspirations of Canada's citizens: i.e. compassion and generosity in our Aid and Refugee programmes; the importance of trade to our prosperity in our trade negotiations and promotions; our belief in international harmony in our political relations; and our long and close association with England and France in our participation in the Commonwealth and la Francophonie.

- T.C. BACON/Belgrade

The mission of EAITC is to bring awareness and understanding of the world to Canada and Canadians and to portray, promote and protect Canada and Canadians in the world, through the dedicated service of its personnel, both at home and abroad.

- S. BRYCE/CPE

To develop the relationship between the government of Canada and the outside world in a fashion that will contribute to the (long-run and short-run) welfare of all Canadians and to the
