London, July 1.-An exciting arrest in connection with the great robbery of the Wertheimer jewels has been effected in a small street off Clapham For weeks the police had been baffled in their attempts to elucldate the mystery, and it was not until four days ago that they were placed in possession of information that at last put them on the right scent. A young man, Italian in ap- the only ones who know what I am main for about two or three months, pearance, was found to be living near doing with my machine, and I decline but the days and the weeks grew into Clapham common, and it was known that he was in possession of at least a portion of the stolen property.

A trap was accordingly laid and arty for the purchase of four of the missing snuff boxes. He was to meet the purchaser on the common. Inspector Fowler and Detective Sergeant Ebbage were lying in wait in a shop doorway, and as the man passed he was seized and handcuffed. The police had been warned that he might be carrying firearms, but none was found upon him. He was taken to with the robbery. In his pockets were found four of the stolen snuff boxes.

On being questioned he gave his name as John Smith, which is no doubt an assumed name. He refused to give an address, but that was already in or more feet. the possession of the police. He declined to give any particulars concerning himself, and later he was removed to Brixton jail. Later the police went to the house where he had lived, and made a superficial examination of the rooms which he had been occupying. There they found nearly all the stolen property. Two miniatures studded with gems and the pictures by Gainsborough and Reynolds are, however, still missing, but the police hope that they may be able to place their hands upon these treasures before long. Mr. Wertheimer was informed of the recovery of the jewels by the police.

Next to them partly severed from the right hand bottom corner of its frame was another picture by Sir Joshua Reynolds-a portrait of Mrs. Froude. It was not, however, seriously injured. In addition to the pictures the eighteen gold eighteenth century French snuff boxes, beautifully enameled, now recovered, and two fine miniatures, were taken.

The thief effected an entry into the ouse by climbing the column of the portico over the front door and pushing back the window of the smokingroom, which adjoins the room in which the treasures were displayed. This was proved by the finding of a number of red berries which had been mocked from the shrubs in the boxes outside the smoking-room window. Soon after the robbery was discov-

Mr. Wright said he had never been up in a balloon, and just now was too busy, but hoped to make an ascension some day. "It is entirely another thing from flying," he said, "which effects one with an intoxication. After having once flown it is almost imposisble to turn to anything else."
