Historians tell us that he afterwards rebuked his Court, but omit to state what they for the rebuke took."

"We don't want any horses," replied the mayor, and the man went out and another came in.

"I've got a horse," he said, "that could kick that Brunnen horse to death in two minutes. What'll the city give for him?"

"The city is not buying horses," sharply rejoined the mayor, and the victor was shown the door.

"I've got a prime kicker for sale, your worship," he began, but the mayor seized him by the shoulder, whirled him about and shot him through the door. The fourth man walked in.

"If you say horse to me," said the mayor, "I'll throw you out of the window."

"The man turned and went out. At the head of the stairs he paused and called out—

"If any horse was here I'd get him to kick this place down."

The mayor slammed the door and set down to open his mail. It was larger than usual. The first letter said—

"Dear Sir—I got a horse to sell for fifty dollars, seventeen years old and warranted to kick. Has killed two men."

Your, W. Hasbald."

ALD. MCGOLDRICK AND ALD. BAXTER. The Former Thinks the Latter is Not Eligible for Seat in Council—Retiring Members are Pleased With Themselves—New Council Meets.

The new common council met this morning in the council chamber at the Department of public works—Christie Ward, Mayor White, Common Clerk Wardrop, Aldermen Hamm, Bullock, Carleton, Holder, Lewis, Tilley, Christie, McGoldrick, Barker, Maxwell, Frink, Aldermen-elect McArthur, Pickett, Sprout, Baxter, Vanwart and Millidge, Recorder Skinner and others.

Aldermen Daley, Robinson and Braun and Ald. Macneave were not present. Alderman Maxwell in retiring said he wished to thank the citizens at large and the members of the council for the uniform courtesy with which he had been treated during his seven years at the board. He had given his time, and he thought all the members had given as much time to the work of the council as was necessary. They had been criticized time and again without any reason, as he had always found the members actuated by the very strongest desire to look after the public duties in an honest and conscientious way. There had been much criticism with regard to expenditures in the departments of public safety and public works, but he thought the money had been well expended. He said the streets here were the equal if not better than in any city in Canada. He was glad to welcome back to the council Messrs. McArthur and Millidge and Baxter, and he said he left the board with regret, as he believed the city's interests were far more important than the legislative.

Ald. Barker said he wanted to explain why he was retiring from the council after only one year of service. He felt he had not the time to give to the work and so stepped out to make room for one who could give more time to it. It was a very important matter, and he should receive every attention. He referred to the condition of Duke street, on which he claimed so much improvement had been made in 20 years. He also touched on the matter of telephones, and civic taxation, and referred to the fact that the streets were in a very poor condition. He said he had a plan in the pocket which he had never used. He did not think that $3 worth of railway tickets would affect a man's independence.

Ald. McGoldrick moved that the clerk of the different boards ascertain what salaries the members of their departments should receive. He said that if such a motion was carried by the council he would not and could not give his time to the matter and accept the responsibility attached thereto. If the board should pass it, he would have to resign his chairmanship.

Ald. McArthur, Bullock, Baxter, Frink and Hamm spoke at some length on the question, and on a vote being taken it was lost. Aldermen McGoldrick, McArthur, Holder and Hamm being the only ones to vote in favor of it.
