It's Against the Law!

The Dominion Insurance Act prohibits a Life Insurance Company estimating what the future profit earnings upon its policies will be.

The Imperial Life, however, is quite content to rest its claims upon the profits which it has actually paid to its policyholders in the past, and upon those which it is paying today.

In fact, the Company is so proud of its record in this regard that it has issued a booklet entitled "The Voice of Experience," which shows the amounts of dividends payable this year to a large number of the holders of Imperial profit-sharing policies.

CANADIAN ARTILLERY
IN THE BIG DRIVE

German Dead in Heaps in No Man's Land—Doubtless Many Buried in Dug-outs

The following letter has been received from Herbert Woodall, of Halifax, who went overseas with a heavy battery. Sergeant Woodall's letter indicates that the Canadian artillery is playing a part in the big drive:

Somewhere in France—We spent Dominion Day all right over here, but not playing ball—not by any means. Some of the boys were talking about where they would be and what they would be doing if at home, on the night before, but before sunrise on the day we think so many of in Canada, we were on our guns, waiting for the order to send Fritz some ejectment notices, and, as you know long before this, he got them, and is still going. I only speak for the part of the line I am on, of course.

Thus our artillery did good work is well known, but if you could have seen, as I did, the wreck we made of their side, you would understand better.

We were not far from the front line, so the next afternoon, in company with one or two more, we went to have a look at the lines, and it was then that we saw things. The German trenches, which have always been made so strong, were like wheel ruts; the ramps had been blown in and just filled them up and everyone in it. After I got over no man's land, the Germans lay around everywhere—one could not walk without walking on them, they were so thick, and in their trenches they lay in heaps. Believe me, if all the Germans who have died recently were musicians, there are some swell bands in both places.

There has been a steady line of prisoners coming down ever since; there must have been over a thousand; as there were nearly six hundred in one trench, and what a poor, miserable lot they were. There was nothing of the bright look of the British Tommy about them. I don't say our boys would look pleased if they were taken prisoners, but the general appearance of them would be a lot better than the bunches of Germans that have passed our position lately. By what I could see of most of them, they were glad to be out of it, and I reckon they have since, in that direction, anyhow.

There must be hundreds of Germans buried in their Dug Outs, as they were so very deep, some as far below as thirty feet, and the effective fire of our artillery closed them in on top of them.

I saw lots of our infantry boys come out of the trenches; lots of them had painted mud on their faces and smudged away came in return for our greeting and inquiries as to how they were getting on up there.

One party of wounded came out, and as they went past one of them turned and said: "Go ahead, Canada, pump them big ones over, our boys will do the rest."

Another chap came out with one wound in his arm and another hole in his shoulder, same side. He was swinging

GOOD THINGS COMING TO THEATRES OF ST. JOHN

THE BLUEBIRD

The Latest in Feature Films

A new organization has entered the feature film field. It is known as the Bluebird Photo Plays, Inc., engineered by several men who are numbered among the biggest in filmdom. "We fully realize that the feature field is regarded by many individuals as being somewhat overcrowded," said one of the film magnates. "At the same time, here is one important fact which the people who are complaining of this condition are overlooking: The market for good features is in fact over-crowded—has never been, in fact. And because of this situation, Bluebird Photo Plays will occupy a field peculiarly its own. Quality, with a capital 'Q', will be the outstanding feature of every one of our productions, or they will not be allowed to greet the photo play patrons' eyes." The general policy of this company will be to present the world's most famous stars—this to include film stars as well as stars of the legitimate stage, productions averaging five reels in length.

The management of the Empress, that enterprising little West Side house (who, judging from the past, knows a good thing when he sees it), has made arrangements to screen a number of these costly productions.

The first will be shown on Monday and Tuesday, being a screen version of that famous English author, Anthony Hope's popular drama "Rupert of Helderberg." It is a sequel to "The Prisoner of Zenda."

The cast is one of the most remarkable ever gotten together. It includes Fane Gail, who needs no introduction here, Henry Ainley, a celebrated English actor who for many years was leading man for Maudie Adams and who will be remembered by theatre-goers for his brilliant work as Gavin Dishart in "The Little Minister," Charles Beck, who gained celebrity in England through his appearance in big melodramas at Drury Lane, London, where he played in "The Whip," "The Sins of Society," "Money," "Ben Hur" and "Robin Hood." The production was made in England where the staging, always effective, brings in view old castles, rich palace interiors, beautiful country scenes, and the like. Suspense is the first name of the author—or it should be—and this picture has preserved that name intact. It is the supreme artistic accomplishment of the silent drama.

AT THE OPERA HOUSE

John Barrymore in Famous Players' Clever Adaptation of "The Red Widow"

"The Red Widow," a photo-adaptation of the celebrated comedy by Channing Pollock and Renold Wolf, in which John Barrymore is starred as Cicerio Hannibal Butts, is the Famous Players' picture at the Opera House Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Flora Zabala, who was the co-star in the original stage production of the play, repeats her stage success in the role of Anna Varvas. John Hendricks and George E. Mack, who played the Baron and Popova in the original version are also seen in these roles in the photo-play.

Cicerio Hannibal Butts, the alias assumed by John Barrymore in this production, is one of the most scowlingly funny roles that this far-famed comedian has ever played. Bombs and Nihilists are by no means the only difficulties which confront Mr. Butts. He has a wife who, after spending some time in jail as the result of his duplicity, yearns to tell him a few things about himself. And there are a number of Russian secret police whose fingers itch for him after they discover that he has smuggled one of the most dangerous Nihilists of Russia into the country as his wife.

"The Red Widow" with its distinguished comedy star, its remarkable cast and its elaborate settings, easily ranks among the few really great contributions to screen humor.

The programme will also include a new scenic and travel picture, showing interesting scenes along the Columbia River, and a good dramatic feature.

AMHERST TO HAVE THE 123RD ROYAL GRENADIER BATTALION

(Amherst Guardian.)

Thirty men making up the advance guards of the 123rd Royal Grenadier Battalion, of Toronto, reached Amherst on Thursday afternoon under the command of Captain Eyleson and are now putting the Winter Fair Building in readiness for the early arrival of Lieutenant-Colonel Kingsmill, officer commanding, and the main body of the battalion. How long the Royal Grenadiers will be quartered in Amherst is something as to which even the officers of the battalion are themselves in doubt. "It may be a week or it may be several months," is the way the uncertainty was expressed by one in authority.

The 123rd has now been recruiting for some eight months or so and is said to be regarded as one of the best battalions yet raised in Ontario. A number of its officers are Royal Military College men and others are former students of Upper Canada College, while the men in the ranks are said to be of a fine average. Certainly, the men of the advance guard have already made a favorable impression upon the townspeople who have seen and met them.

All told, there will be upwards of 1,900 more soldiers in Amherst when the battalion reaches the town. The precise time of the arrival is not yet announced but, at least, The Guardian may say that Amherst people won't have long to wait before having a chance to welcome the Ontario soldiers. Of late the 123rd has been quartered at Camp Borden, but that camp has proven anything but suitable for military purposes and the different battalions are being moved to other quarters.
