$470,000,000 FOR DRINK.

(Toronto Globe.)

In the last twelve months, during a period of industrial depression unexampled in a century, the British nation spent $470,000,000 for alcoholic liquors. The waste was not the less because the government recovered $200,000,000 in taxation. The fact remains that $270,000,000 was spent, on the average, by every family in the country for strong drink. The amount is enormously in excess of all the money poured out by public and private agencies for charity, relief and unemployment benefits. The government's new programme to stimulate trade, relieve distress and provide work involves only a fraction of the sum that is spent on intoxicants. The money is lost to the nation, it adds to the mass of human misery and to the problems and difficulties which the nation is facing. When millions throughout Europe are perishing for food, the people of that continent are spending enough in drink to feed and clothe every starving man, woman and child.

British temperance workers, while they have no hope of attaining prohibition in the near future, are trying to lessen the consumption of liquor and diminish the evils of the traffic by other means. A memorial, signed by 114,000 school teachers, urges that no alcoholic beverage be sold to children apparently under eighteen years of age. The United Kingdom Alliance is entering upon propaganda to persuade business men and industrial workers of the economic effects of prohibition. British Methodists have inaugurated a five-year educational campaign. There is no reason for discouragement in the local opinion results in Scotland. Though comparatively few bars were abolished, 142,000 votes were cast for No License, as against 182,000 for No Change. The battle will be continued in England and Wales under the new local option law. The liquor interests were never so powerful financially, and they control both Houses of Parliament, but the tide of public opinion is rising against the nation's greatest sin.

STORIES OF THE UNDERWORLD.

Mrs. E. M. Whitmore of New York will tell of her experiences in rescue work in opium dens and red light districts in the large American cities Sunday afternoon, Nov. 13, at 4 o'clock. Address "Women Only." Price 25c. Ward street church, under auspices King's Daughters. See Saturday's papers for further announcements.
