A sudden change came over Lady Audley's face; the pretty, rosy cheeks faded out from her cheeks, and left them waxen white, and angry flashes lightened in her blue eyes. 'What have I done to you, Robert Audley, she cried passionately—'what have I done to you that you should hate me so?' He answered her very gravely: 'I had a friend, Lady Audley, whom I loved very dearly, and since I have lost him I fear that my feelings toward other people are strangely embittered.' 'You mean the Mr. Talboys who went to Australia?' 'Yes, I mean the Mr. Talboys was told set out for Liverpool with the idea of going to Australia.' 'And do you not believe in his having sailed for Australia?' 'I do not.' 'But why not?' 'Forgive me, Lady Audley, if I decline to answer that question.' 'As you please,' she said carelessly. 'A week after my friend disappeared,' continued Robert, 'I posted an advertisement to the Sydney and Melbourne papers, calling upon him if he was in either city when the advertisement appeared, to write and tell me of his whereabouts, and also calling on any one who had met him, either in the colonies or on the voyage out, to give me any information respecting him. George Talboys left Essex, or disappeared from Essex, on the 6th of September last. I ought to receive some answer to this advertisement by the end of this month. To-day is the 27th; the time draws very near.'

'And if you receive no answer?' asked Lady Audley. 'If I receive no answer I shall think my fears have been not unfounded, and I shall do my best to act.' 'What do you mean by that?' 'Ah, Lady Audley, you remind me how very powerless I am in this matter. My friend might have been made away with in this very inn, and I might stay here for a twelve-month, and go away at the last as ignorant of his fate as if I had never crossed the threshold. What do we know of the mysteries that may hang about the houses we enter? If I were to go tomorrow into that commonplace, plebeian, eight-roomed house in which Maria Manning and her husband murdered their guest, I should have no awful prescience of that bygone horror. Foul deeds have been done under the most hospitable roofs; terrible crimes have been committed amid the fairest scenes, and have left no trace upon the spot where they were done. I do not believe in mandrake, or in bloodstains that no time can efface. I believe rather that we may walk unconsciously in an atmosphere of crime, and breathe none the less freely. I believe that we may look into the smiling face of a murderer, and admire its tranquil beauty.'

My lady laughed at Robert's earnestness. 'You seem to have quite a taste for discussing these horrible subjects,' she said, rather scornfully, 'you ought to have been a detective police officer.'

My lady laughed at Robert's earnestness. 'You seem to have quite a taste for discussing these horrible subjects,' she said, rather scornfully, 'you ought to have been a detective police officer.'

'I sometimes think I should have been a good one.' 'Why?' 'Because I am patient.' 'But to return to Mr. George Talboys, whom we lost sight of in your eloquent discussion. What if you receive no answer to your advertisements?' 'I shall then consider myself justified in concluding my friend is dead.' 'Yes, and then—?' 'I shall examine the effects he left at my chambers.' 'Indeed! and what are they? Coats, waistcoats, carnished boots, and meerschaum pipes, I suppose,' said Lady Audley, laughing. 'No; letters—from his friends his old schoolfellows, his father, his brother officers.'

'Yes?' 'Letters, too, from his wife.' 'My lady was silent for some few moments, looking thoughtfully at the fire.' 'Have you ever seen any of the letters written by the late Mrs. Talboys?' she asked presently. 'Never. Poor soul her letters are not likely to throw much light upon my friend's fate. I dare say she wrote the usual womanly scrawl. There are very few who write so charming and uncommon a hand as yours, Lady Audley.'

'Ah, you know my hand, of course.' 'Yes, I know it very well indeed.' My lady warmed her hands once more, and then taking up the big muff which she had laid aside upon a chair, prepared to take her departure. 'You have refused to accept my apology, Mr. Audley,' she said; 'but I trust you are not the less assured of my feelings toward you.' 'Perfectly assured, Lady Audley.' 'Then good-by, and let me recommend you not to stay so long in this miserable, draughty place, if you do not wish to take rheumatism back to Figtree Court.'

considerable time; but as the express was generally a long train, and as there were a great many passengers from Norfolk carrying guns and pointers, and other paraphernalia of a critical description, it took a long while to make matters agreeable to all claimants, and even the barrister's seraphic indifference to mundane affairs nearly gave way.

INSULIN IS DISCOVERED IN NEARLY ALL ORGANS

The discovery of insulin in almost every organ of the body as well as in the pancreas is the latest development of the epoch-making diabetic extract. This most important of all the results of experiments since the original discovery has been made by Dr. C. H. Best, who collaborated with Dr. F. G. Banting from the outset in the laboratories of Toronto University. Subjecting different organs of the body to the insulin extracting process, Mr. Best obtained something that has all the properties of insulin. This discovery has been reported to the American Medical Association. All experiments since have added to the evidence that this insulin from the tissues of the other organs cannot be distinguished in its effect from the insulin of the pancreas. To make sure of this conclusion, tissues were finally used of diabetic animals, in which to produce the diabetic symptoms, the pancreas has to be removed. In these, as in specimens of animals from the slaughter houses, insulin was found for example, in the blood, the muscle tissue, the liver, the spleen and the brain. The practical side of these experiments demonstrates that it is possible to manufacture insulin from a far wider range of tissue should anything ever happen to the pancreas supply. So long, however, as the pancreas supplies are available it is improbable that the insulin from these other sources will need to be used. For it is the estimate of Mr. Best and Dr. A. Scott, who collaborated in the experiments, that there is four or five times as much insulin in the pancreas as in any of the other tissue so far analyzed.

SUNSHINE AND ROSES

If life were all sunshine and roses We'd weary, I think, of the glare; The petals would cumber our pathway, The perfume would burden the air. So give us the storm and the trouble, Let rain with our plans interfere, That we may rejoice at the season When roses and sunshine are here; For none of us cares for the deadly Monotonous sameness of things To rob us of anticipation— The hope that eternally springs.

The Boston, Halifax and Newfoundland Steamship Company, 81 Commercial Wharf, Boston, was petitioned into bankruptcy, by creditors in the United States District Court here yesterday. Creditors who allege that the Company is insolvent are: The Maritime Coaling Company, Boston, with a claim of $3025; Hume Kimball Company, Boston, $2400; Federal Lumber Company, Boston, $4500.—Boston Herald, Mar. 1st.

The call today is for good men and true to manage the affairs of the country. There would be more of that class available but for the fact that in the past we have been guilty of "killing the prophets" and "stoning" them who came unto us. It we haven't done it ourselves we have looked on complacently and watched others doing it.

Hard Work Means Success

There never was a goal worth getting but you must work to attain. You must suffer and bleed for it, cling to your creed for it. Fail and go at it again.
 Success is no whim of the moment, no crown for the indolent brow. You must battle and try for it, offer to die for it; Lose it yet win it somehow.
 The Pathway to glory is rugged, and many the heart-aches you'll know. He who seeks to be master must rise from disaster. Must take as he giveth the blow.
 There's no royal highway to splendour, no short cut to fortune or fame. You must fearlessly fight for it, dare to be right for it. Failing, yet playing the game.
 The test of man's merit is trouble, the proof of his work is distress. Much as you long for it, man must be strong for it. Work is the door to success.

HEALTH is the greatest blessing in the world. If you are HEALTHY you can work hard but not other wise. HARD WORK means SUCCESS but you will NEVER be able to work very hard without HEALTH and STRENGTH. If you require HEALTH and STRENGTH use

NOTICE

To Owners and Masters of British Ships

The attention of Owners and Masters of British Ships is called to the 74th Section of the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1894."
 75.—(1) A Ship belonging to a British Subject shall hoist the proper national colors—
 (a) on a signal made to her by one of His Majesty's ships, including any vessel under the command of an officer of His Majesty's navy or full pay, and
 (b) on entering or leaving any foreign port and
 (c) if of fifty tons gross tonnage or upwards, on entering or leaving any British Port.
 (2) If default is made on board any ship in complying with this section the master of the ship shall for each offence be liable to a fine not exceeding one hundred pounds.
 At time of war it is necessary for every British Ship to hoist the colours and heave to if signalled by a British Warship; if a vessel hoists no colours and runs away, it is liable to be fired upon.

Stall's Books

Rev. T. Albert Moore, D. D., General Secretary of the Dept. of Social Service and Evangelism of the Meth. Church of Canada, who visited Newfoundland in Sept., 1917, in connection with the Social Congress, says:

"Stall's Books on Avoided Subjects have been standard works for such a long time that it seems almost unnecessary to say a word in their behalf. I believe they have accomplished great good, and are written with care and delicacy, at the same time with sufficient frankness or the modest discussion of these delicate subjects. They are safe books for general reading, especially if from the various books there is proper selection for the youth or adult, man or woman, as the case may be."

CHAPTER XIX.

THE WRITING IN THE BOOK.

It was exactly five minutes past four as Mr. Robert Audley stepped out upon the platform at Shore-ditch, and waited placidly until such time as his dogs and his portmanteau should be delivered up to the attendant porter who had called his cab, and undertaken the general conduct of his affairs, with that disinterested courtesy which does such infinite credit to a class of servants who are forbidden to accept the tribute of a grateful public. Robert Audley waited with consummate patience for a
