

POETRY

THE QUEEN IN A BUMPER.

"The Queen in a bumper!—We'll drink
To the crown,
To the sceptre so mildly held o'er us For dear are those symbols of ancient renown;
They were dear to our fathers before us!
And O! when the spirit that is in them falls dead
On the ear and the heart of a Briton, That moment, his destiny's willing!

The Queen of the Island is no tyrant to
us;
And no faction shall keep her a van-tal!
The peasant is free in his cottage, the Peer
In the heart of his castle;
And shall not our Queen be, in word, and in will,
As free as her people around her?
O! death to the traitor who, butcher still,
In letters would bind, or have bound, her!?"

THE WIND THAT SWEEPS OUR NATIVE SEA.

BY MR. MOODIE.

The wind that sweeps our native sea
No tyrant's power can resist; Resistless, unsubdued and free, It rules the restless main—Nor massive mast—nor swelling sail May long defy the mighty gale.

Free as that wind—strong as that wave
That clasps that lovely strand;
The sons of Britannia long shall brave,
The storms of every land—And foreign powers shall seek in vain,
To seize thy empire on the main.

Vain is the threat—whilst hearts of oak,
With manly courage glow;
For foreign arms with hostile stroke
To lay their proud crest low, Our hold of sure defence shall be—
We ever were—and dare be FREE!

The finest writers, the most refined researches into causes and effects, whether in ancient or modern times, have never yet been able to describe what love is however much assistance their endeavours may have had from language the most eloquent and convincing, and reflecting the most deep and searching. The subject has been one which has invariably baffled the whole world, and this in the face of its daily occurrence—and Shakespeare that master genius, who is to this hour and will doubtless remain an oracle and authority on every subject connected with the passions that pervade the human heart has proved in himself and at fault in this.—Love stands on an eminence hitherto unapproachable; felt by all—understood by none.

A schoolmaster who was as fond of the use of his young as the use of his gloves, was asked the difference between gravity and levity.—"When I've a man's weight of gravity," replied the boy, "then gravity vanishes, and my gravitation begins to operate."

As the dark mist sends upward, and out of its very heart, the rare Persian rose, so does hope grow out of evil; and the darker the evil the brighter the hope, as from a richer and lovelier soil comes the more vigorous plants and large flowers.

Dean Swift having paid a visit to Sir Arthur Ashevin's country seat, and being on the morning of his return to his deserted dwelling a few minutes longer than he expected at his breakfast, found when he came to the door his own man on horseback, and a servant of Sir Arthur's horse to the horse he was to ride himself. He mounted, turned the head of his horse towards his own man, and asked him in a low voice if he did not think he should give something to the servants who held his horse, and if he thought five shillings would be too much.
"No, Sir, it will not, if you mean to do the thing handsomely," was the reply.— The Dean made no remark upon this, but when he paid the man weekly account wrote under it, "Deducted from this, for money paid to Sir Arthur's servant for doing your business, five shillings."

A day or two ago a radio was wonderfully well, and was sentenced to 3 months' imprisonment for selling ball cartridges to the Precursors of Ulster.—Limerick Chron.
