

WEEKLY WEATHER SYNOPSIS.

Victoria Meteorological Office,
14th to 20th January, 1903.

The weather during this week, like that of the previous one, was remarkably cloudy, and although no rain fell upon the first three days, considerable fog and light winds from the northward prevailed. By the night of Friday, 16th, the barometer pressure gave way over this province and increased from Laurensburg northwards to the Territories. This change caused the winds on the Coast to become southerly and the weather unsettled and mild, to rain upon each day to the close of the week, both here and on the Lower Mainland. During the night, a series of storm areas from the Pacific crossed this province. These disturbances caused southerly gales on the coast of Vancouver Island and Washington, and a thunderstorm at Astoria during the afternoon of the 18th. Upon the last day of the week the barometer fell rapidly along the Coast in advance of an important storm from the Pacific, which with a centre below 29.10 inches, passed inland across Vancouver Island. By the afternoon, a strong southerly gale prevailed on the coast of Vancouver Island and Washington, and the wind at Tatoosh Island reached a velocity of 60 miles an hour. The greatest force of the wind here ranged from 16 to 40 miles from 5 to 7 p. m.

The weather for this season of the year has been mild both in January and February, while in the Yukon the temperature has ranged from below the freezing point of the week to 54 below at its close. Owing to the passage of these Pacific storm areas to the Territories, the temperature three days were mild, followed by very low temperatures in Saskatchewan and Manitoba. The lowest temperature recorded was 28 below zero on the 20th, and the highest, 40 to 44 above in Alberta.

At Victoria—Amount of bright sunshine recorded was 3 hours and 42 minutes; rainfall, .89 inch; highest temperature, 51 on 20th; and lowest, 34.9 on 14th.

New Westminster—Rainfall, .14 inch; highest temperature, 40 on 20th; lowest, 28 on 14th, 15th and 16th.

Kamloops—No precipitation; highest temperature, 40 on 18th; and lowest, 22 on 19th and 20th.

Kootenai—No precipitation; highest temperature, 30 on 18th and 20th; lowest, 10 on 16th.

A concert given by W. J. Cole, the electrician, in the A. O. U. W. hall Tuesday under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A., was fairly well patronized. In the programme, however, those attending were somewhat disappointed, as it was not by any means up to the standard of excellence anticipated. The selections given by an orchestra of 12 pieces under the leadership of A. Parfitt were much enjoyed.

Lithmen have experienced considerable difficulty in the new telephone line to Claycoquet Sound. Finn Wednesday received word from Vancouver that the piano player, whom he has for some time been trying to secure for his orchestra, will arrive here in time to take his place in the orchestra at the Hockey Club dance at the Dallas on Friday evening. It is now assured that the date will be likely patronized, as tickets have sold rapidly during the last two days. Any member of the committee, and Hibben & Co., or the Victoria Book & Stationery Company, will furnish tickets to show up yet supplied. The unusually low figure at which tickets have been issued this year is explained by the fact that the club are not seeking to make money, but merely to make the dance a social gathering. Expenses, since it is given in honor of the two visiting hockey clubs from Vancouver, and for this reason the club certainly deserves the support of all devotees of the "Eight Fantastics." The ball room decorations are already well under way. Special cars to leave the Dallas for all parts of the city at the conclusion of the dance have been arranged for.
