GIRL MAKES RECORD
IN ALPINE CLIMBING
Is First to Accomplish Ascent of the Matterhorn This Season.

GENEVA, July 17.—The first ascent of the Matterhorn this season was made by a young Swiss girl of 18, Miss Leonie Gindraux, of Zermatt. She was plainly visible on the summit, and her descent was watched with interest through telescopes from below.

Roped between two guides, she fought her way through the deep snow with untiring energy, and negotiated the perilous rocks with great skill and courage.

An hour after she arrived a Swiss climber and his guides also scaled the summit.

COMMERCIAL AGENTS.
While Great Britain is beginning to take an interest in the development and extension of trade in Canada, this colony is making an important move towards capturing a larger share of the United States market.

Canada has commercial agents in a number of countries whose services have in the past proved to be of great value to shippers here. There has never been any satisfactory system of receiving advice from the United States as to the requirements of the markets there, and the form in which goods should be manufactured and shipped, but United States producers have kept in close touch with the Canadian market and through the information forwarded by consuls and other commercial agents the exports to Canada have been steadily increased. It is thus a matter of no small importance that Canada has recently enlisted the services of the British consuls in the United States, as commercial agents, and will receive from them such information as may be gathered regarding the requirements of the markets. The British consular service is efficient, the officers are well qualified, and should prove of much value to this country. Canadians have always relied upon the services of the British representatives in questions in which government action was required, but there has been a certain natural hesitation about asking assistance in the promotion of commerce. Now that such a request has been made, and is willingly complied with, Canada should be able to make a better showing than ever in her trade with the United States. The American tariff, of course, shuts out many articles manufactured in this country, but there are other lines which ought to be pushed as much as possible, and this can only be done by keeping a finger on the pulse of the market.

THE HUGGING QUESTION.
To hug or not to hug, that is the question. The police magistrate has declared that this popular use of the arms on the part of men and women in St. John must be stopped. He has ordered the police to arrest all huggers who may be observed in public places, and bring them before him. "And," Judge Ritchie goes on to say, "I will show them whether they can hug or not about the streets at night."

Just for the sake of argument and with all due respect to the magistrate, the Star maintains that men, women and children may hug when, where and how they please, on the streets or in their homes, in the old graveyard or in yachts on the river, and that neither the magistrate nor the police have any right to interfere.

Hugging is an institution which has been honored through long generations, which has come down to us from the early lives of men of whom our grandfathers probably never heard. But no matter how originated, or how its history has been, it is now a part of the birthright of every man—and every woman if she feels like it. Hugging is an ancient custom, of world wide popularity, practiced wherever civilization has spread. It is not only tolerated, but encouraged, though of course, as an expression of affection, the delicate sensibilities of most people prefer that it should be indulged in in private, rather than that it should be put to such a use before the gaze of edited but unsympathetic crowds.

It often happens that those who desire to hug do not find the opportunity in their homes, or in the homes of the object they wish to embrace. Perhaps the man is not allowed to call. What then must be done? Shall they stand on the back door steps and allow their arms to go to waste, or will they seek a quiet and shady retreat in the old graveyard, Queen Square, or Seaside Park, and embrace to their heart's content? Assuredly the whole outdoors was made for huggers just as much as for smokers, and they have a perfect right to put the free air to this use if they so desire.

There are, however, certain restrictions, hugging, if indulged in to such an extent that the public are apt to congregate and create a disturbance, may be prevented. It must not be of such a nature as will disturb the privacy or interfere with the freedom of any other citizen. It must not become a nuisance. Hugging is not indecent, it is not criminal, and it is permissible not only under the British constitution but according to recent judgments of men learned in the law both in England and the United States, who do not have at times found pleasure in themselves. Only a week or two ago a policeman in New York arrested a man and woman who were mutually enjoying a reciprocal hug in one of the parks. The officer was reprimanded and the couple were dismissed to complete their performance. So huggers need have no fear. They may be arrested, fined or imprisoned, but they can still have the sublime assurance that they will be justified whenever they make an appeal to the Privy Council, and surely in the defence of this, a widespread and enjoyable occupation, such an appeal would be made at once.

THE KING'S REGRETS.
King Edward finds it impossible to visit Canada. He will never know what he is missing. This country is very different from what it was when he was a boy, and his youthful recollections will be of no service in enabling him to form an idea of what the place is like now. Every Canadian will regret that the King finds it impossible to visit us. It was of course understood that there were many difficulties in the way and although it was generally hoped that he might be able to come yet all were prepared for disappointment. While this will cause widespread regret, Canada will accept the King's decision with due acknowledgment of the effort he has made to meet the wishes of the people, and will continue to assure him of her unvarying loyalty.

THE HEART OF THE HILLS.
There's a wonderful country lying far off from the noisy town, Where the windflower swings And the tumbling brooks come down. 'Tis the land of light and of laughter, Where peace all the woodland fills, 'Tis the land that lies 'Neath the summer skies, In the heart of the happy hills.

The road to that wonderful country Leads out from the gates of care, And the tired feet In the dusty street Are longing to enter there. And a voice from that land is calling In the rush of a thousand rills, "Come away today, To the heart of the happy hills."

Far away in that wonderful country Where the clouds are always blue, In the shadow of cool, By the foaming pool, We may put on strength anew. We may drink from the magic fountains Where the wine of life distills. And never a care Shall find us there, In the heart of the happy hills.

A BIT OF ENGLISH HUMOR.
Recently the London Morning Post contained the following advertisement:—Wanted—A nurse for night duty only; one thoroughly accustomed to bottle babies. This called forth the remark from the British Journal of Nursing: "To bottle babies? How is it done and for what purpose are these innocents used when bottled?"

DISAPPOINTED IN THE BOY.
"I don't know what kind of figure that boy'll cut in life," said the old man, with a sigh. He's gone on shattering all my hopes."

"Why, what's he been a-doin' of?" "He's been a-doin' of nothin'," was the reply. "I've seen him pull a barn door when I had set my stakes to make a carpenter or a congressman out of him!"

OTHERWISE ENGAGED.
"Do you know, sir, that I saw you kiss my daughter just now?" "Really, now, I didn't know it; I was too much interested to notice anyone else."

A GENEROUS CARDINAL.
Cardinal Bonaparte was a grandson of Lucien Bonaparte. He was a very charitable man. During one of his illnesses a want came to the door begging for alms. "Give him what money you will and let him go," said the cardinal. "There is no money, eminence. The silver spoons are all given away. We have nothing left but pewter spoons." "Well, bring him in and give him a good meal."

HE MIGHT.
"Ah," sighed the lovers' youth, "may I not hope that you will be mine forever and forever?" "Yes," replied the cruel girl, with a yawn, "you may hope that long if you wish."

A COINCIDENCE.
"I suppose you enjoy hearing your name called since he went to college?" "Yes," answered Farmer Cottoswell, "but ain't it kind of a coincidence that the many of them classical quotations begin with 'Rah, rah, rah'?"

HIS CHARACTER.
A cook had been going round a station in the south of India with the following "character" and is somewhat surprised he is not engaged. "Abdul has been my cook for three months. It seems much longer. He leaves on account of ill-health—my ill health."

GIVEN AND TAKEN AWAY.
A tiny bridemaid at a wedding the other day surveyed the departing bride and groom with a gloomy brow. "Oh, dear," she pouted, "sister was going to get married today and have lots of fun! And now that man's taken her away!"

A CINCH.
Houston Post—"Do you think I could get your chum to marry me?" "She detests you, but you can get her if you work it right."

"Tell me how?" "Pretend to be dead in love with me and I will pretend I am crazy about you."

HER QUEST.
San Francisco Chronicle—"Speaking of Irish bulls," remarked Clerk Brownell, "my wife had a funny introduction to the last evening. She was standing on our front doorstep, when a woman with a shovel pulled over her head came hesitatingly along the sidewalk. Seeing my wife the woman paused and said:—

"Fardon me, but are you acquainted in this neighborhood?" "I am. What can I do for you?" replied Mrs. Brownell.

"Can you tell me where Mr. McCloud lives? I understand he just died, poor fellow."

ENGLISH MOB CHASES WOMAN ORATORS.
Breaks Up Open Air Meeting of English Suffragettes.

Mrs. Mitchell Makes Good Fight, Knocking Down One of the Mob Leaders—Mrs. Parkhurst and James K. Hardie Escape.

LONDON, July 16.—Retribution has befallen the suffragettes, or, as one newspaper calls them, the fooligans, in Manchester, where their own meeting was more completely wrecked than any they have tried to break up. A huge, good natured crowd listened to the speakers for some time, but when dissentients began to roast the orators with inconvenient comments their spirit became infectious. The voices of the speakers were drowned in derisive shouts and laughter.

Mrs. Mitchell, Kier Hardie, a Labor member of Parliament, appeared, and the animosity he lately courted by championing the Zulus against the South African colonists broke loose. The crowd soon became rowdy, and many of the audience started for the platform.

The meeting was being held in a deep hollow in a public park, and as the crowd surged downward the position became dangerous, threatening a murderous crush at the bottom of the hollow. Women shrieked and fainting. Men on the lower slopes began to fight their way up the hill, to prevent a catastrophe, General pandemonium followed.

Realizing the danger, Mr. Hardie and his supporters organized a movement uphill, conducting the women speakers, and reached the top of the hill, where they were mobbed, being obliged to run for safety.

Mrs. Hardie and Mrs. Parkhurst escaped by scaling high spiked railings. They were vainly pursued by their enemies.

The other women speakers were less fortunate. They were hustled, hooted at and chivied. Eventually they took refuge in a house which was besieged by a howling mob until the police rescued them.

Mrs. Mitchell, one of the suffragettes, made a good fight. In a scuffle she knocked down one male assailant and smashed her umbrella over the head of another.

TOO MANY.
"And David has five kings before him," read the pastor. "Gosh!" exclaimed the man in the rear pew. "I'm glad David wasn't in the game last night!"

SPANISH ANARCHIST ARRESTED IN VAT
Police Believe They Have Found Author of the Bomb Outrage in Paris.

MADRID, July 17.—The police at Ubeda, in Andalusia, have arrested an anarchist in a vat.

He was disguised as a pilgrim, and had been going about selling images of the saints and chaplets, but aroused the suspicion of the authorities by staying at the house of a well known Carlist.

When the police visited the house the man fled, and hid himself in the garden in a large vat. He is believed to be FARRAS AVINO, who is wanted in connection with the bomb outrage in the Blue Room, Paris, when the lives of King Alfonso and President Loubet were threatened.

Police believe they have found the author of the bomb outrage in Paris.

"That is Where I Intended to Shoot Her," After Long Lookout for Real Grievance They Manufacture One.

PARIS, July 17.—The pretty little town of St. Claude, in the department of the Jura, is enjoying itself in its own sweat away.

At some time or other within the last three months every organization in the place worthy of the name, and one, has on some pretext or other ordered a general strike of its members. The solitary exception was the town band. It has now ceased to be the case, for the band has gone on strike.

Everyone else had a cause of complaint, but the luckless musicians had none. They became an object of ridicule for the whole town. This, however, has now ceased to be the case, for the band has gone on strike.

After mature deliberation the members of the band gravely decided that the tri-weekly concerts were attended by too many bourgeois, and that to continue to play before such audiences would be a profanation of their art. So the men have laid down their instruments.

The sequel has also its comic-opera touch. The despised bourgeois, too, have gone on strike, but in a financial sense. They have cut off supplies from all the local music societies, and in any sense they have issued a manifesto claiming their rights, winding up with "Vive la Greve!" Meanwhile the band is said to be somewhat puzzled as to its next move, not exactly knowing what to make of the present situation.

MEN DRIVEN INSANE BY INTENSE HEAT
Terrible Weather Conditions Responsible For Epidemic of Suicide Throughout Spain.

MADRID, July 17.—An epidemic of heat madness has broken out all over Spain.

The temperature is almost unendurable, and is causing innumerable cases of suicide. The thermometer stood at 104 in the shade in Madrid today.

Four persons who became violently insane were arrested in the streets of the capital today. There have been as many similar cases each day during the last week.

The ambulance stations and hospitals are kept busy attending to sunstroke patients. In one institution alone over 100 persons who had succumbed to the heat were treated today.

Famine is again threatened in the southern provinces owing to the parched state of the ground, which is rendering agricultural labor impossible. The peasants have not yet recovered from last year's terrible visitation.

The lives of thousands of them will be sacrificed if the hot weather continues, as the government will be unable to afford the necessary relief.
