

Etna Again Belches Death And Frenzied Populace Flees

Birdseye view of burning Mt. Etna and the section of Sicily around it, showing two of the towns that have been destroyed by lava and other cities in the volcano's eye.

Catania, Italy, March 29.—There has been another eruption of Mount Etna which has set a stream of lava in motion through the Fra Diavolo district. It also set in quicker motion a stream advancing on Mount Fusara and one threatening San Leo. Loud rumblings are now heard and as a result people in the villages and hamlets on the mountain side are again greatly excited.

Eruptions from Mount Etna increased during Monday and as night fell they had reached their original violence. Lava which has formed in craters was expelled with such force that masses were broken into fragments and hurled to great distances. Explosion followed explosion in rapid succession and the rumblings of the great volcano were almost incessant. Lava and ashes were showered afar, causing much damage and bringing terror to the people. As a result of this the populace yesterday afternoon reformed their processions and carrying images and holy relics, knelt near the lava streams, imploring God to avert the scourge that threatened their homes. The bells of the village church were tolled continuously last night.

That most celebrated of all volcanoes, Mt. Etna, which is again demonstrating to the people of Sicily that it isn't extinct yet, not by any means—as famous in the myths of the ancients as in the facts of the historian.

Its name is derived from the Greek word, aitna, a burning mountain, by which it is still commonly known to Sicilians, is a combination of the Italian words, aitna and aitna. During the Saracenic occupation of Sicily (827-1090) Etna was called Gebel Utamat, the mountain of fire, and the second portion of Mongibello is a relic of the Arabic name.

It is two miles in perpendicular height, measures 100 miles round at the base, with an ascent of 30 miles, and its crater forms a circle three and one-half miles in circumference. It is 100 eruptions beginning long before the Christian era, and its victims number far into the hundreds of thousands.

When the Messina earthquake laid desolate half the island in December, 1908, the ignorant, superstitious Sicilians thought that the great Etna was making another effort to get out of his mountain prison. His failure to look tranquilly upon the awful results of that terrible earthquake.

It is interesting to note that the lava flow of the present time is making another effort to get out of his mountain prison. His failure to look tranquilly upon the awful results of that terrible earthquake.

Being too gay he got in bad with the gods. He was punished for his impiety by being overwhelmed by the thunderbolts of Jupiter. Then the Italian hunkies dug a big hole under Mt. Etna and the gods sent him into it.

But don't think for a minute that old Encecladus was dead. Longfellow found out differently, because he tells us:

"Under Mount Etna he lies, It is slumber, it is not death; For he struggles at times to rise, And above him the lurid skies Are hot with his fiery breath."

It is interesting to note that the lava flow of the present time is making another effort to get out of his mountain prison. His failure to look tranquilly upon the awful results of that terrible earthquake.

Evolution of a New Political Order Now in Progress in England—The Situation Reviewed.

New York, March 29.—I. N. Ford writing in the Tribune from London says: The evolution of a new political order is in progress. It becomes more and more apparent that the old order is being broken up and a new one is being built up.

The government may stand or fall, and the next appeal to the country may be decisive or otherwise for one side for a new British constitution is now in the making and since the forces of rank and prejudice and the inertia of conservatism are great, the new order will not be established without a long and arduous struggle.

The suspension of the budget was defended last November by the peers of the realm. It was a bold move and one that has not been equalled since the days of the Stuarts.

These two problems of themselves are sufficiently perplexing; but each is also complicated with the relations of the chambers and the necessity for reforming the irresponsible one. From the Radical point of view the upper House, if it is allowed to remain, must cease to challenge the supremacy of the popular assembly, and must be content with exercising the functions of a non-partisan revising chamber.

These two problems of themselves are sufficiently perplexing; but each is also complicated with the relations of the chambers and the necessity for reforming the irresponsible one.

PAULHAM SORE AT HIS TREATMENT
Cherbourg, March 29.—M. Paulham, the French aviator, who arrived on the steamer President Grant, expresses very bitter sentiments with reference to his trip to the United States. He said today that enthusiasm was shown only in their case where there were large French colonies. The Americans were unmoved do not seem to be interested in aviation. "It is the only public in the world," said Paulham, "which is not interested in the man who flies. The Americans were jealous that a Frenchman could fly in a French machine." Paulham concluded a long diatribe on the bad faith and hostility of the United States. He said today that enthusiasm was shown only in their case where there were large French colonies.
